

The "Finch"

THE "Finch" is another entirely different form of eyeglass which has grown into great popularity in the larger American cities. It is constructed with solid nose-bridge similar to spectacles; this keeps the alignment of the lenses exactly correct, a feature which is much appreciated by the medical and optical professions. The nose-guards or grips in this style are like four tentacles reaching out for the very best spot on the nose on which to fasten themselves. The appearance is very neat, and although like spectacles in its construction, absolutely retains its eyeglass effect.
