DAY WITH THEIR POET

Evidence Against Hunter.

London, March 1.— (C. A. P.)

—Griseme Hunter and Gavim Cowper appeared for trial in the Glasgow High Court yesterday to answer the charge of fraud in connection with the Canadian Immigration Society David Power said that on Hunter's promise of a year's engagement, he went to Montreal, but failed to obtain the promised work or employment on his own account. He afterwards ran out of money and had to seek refuge in the "home for stranded Scotchmen," otherwise St. Andrew's Home, where he met several others of Hunter's party. A score of witnesses for the prosecution gave similar evidence, and the case was adjourned. Longfellow's Birthday Fittingly Observed at St. Joseph's Separate School

Delightful Program by the Pupils-Addresses by Reverend Visitors Present.

Young Cerbett Out of it.

San Francisco, Cal., March 1.—Battling Nelson of Chicago and Young Corbett, ex-champion featherweight of the world, met for the second time at Woodward's Pavilion last night in a contest to determine which of the two shall meet Champion Britt in a return match. Between 4,000 and 5,000 persons witnessed the spectacle. Nelson made Corbett appear the poorest tyro at the fighting game, when he practically knocked him out in the middle of the ninth round. In order to save their man a complete knockout the seconds three up the sponge. On Monday afternoon the pupils of the Fourth Class of the Separate school gave a delightful little pro-gram by way of celebration of the birthday of one of their favorite cets, Henry W. Longfellow, whose cems they have been studying dur ing the past six weeks, The descriptive and analytical essays bespoke careful and intelligent study of the life and works of this much-loved poet, and the scholarly manner in which they delivered the several roems showed the guests quite clearly that as one little girl, using a quotation from Longfellow himself rettily expressed it, these had out the children's roet 'down in the dungeon in the round tower of their hearts."

dence of County Councillor Dennis

In a prelude, introductory to the program, Dora Primeau welcomed he guests, and in a few well-choses words suggested that the pupils' celebration was not to express their own feeble and imperfect thoughts but to listen to his, and to get a little nearer to the gentle heart of him who was "the sweetest of all singers." The interest aroused by the words of this enthusiastic little speaker was increased by the reading of the roet's biography by Master Charles O'Gorman, who in his asual bright and cheerful manner related many little incidents of the rublic and home life of the poet.

"The Children's Hour" was recited in such a sweet childlike manner by Marie Pinsonneault, that all felt in touch with that deep affection for children which was so characteristic of Longfellow.

Joe Pleasence gave a masterly paraphrase of that soul-inspiring "Psalm of Life."

"Psalm of Life."

"The Sermon of St. Francis" was prefaced by a short essay by Azora Neff in which she ortrayed his great love of nature.

The boys of the class then gave a

The boys of the class then gave a concert declamation of the "Village Blacksmith," which was followed by a description of the arm chair made from the "spreading chestnut tree" and presented to the poet on his 22nd birthday by the children of Cambridge. This essay, read by Kathleen Mannion, was followed by the reading of the poem "From the Arm Chair" written on that occasion.

Arm Chair" written on that occasion.

The three scenes of "The Sicilian's Tale" were described by Marie Berard, Ireme Santre and Agatha Mannion, after which Ursula Kelly gave in a charming manner "The Arrow and the Song."

The touching story of "Evangeline" was exceedingly well told by Mary Brennan, who introduced into her essay many apt quotations.

"Excelsior," by Chas. O'Gorman, and "The Poet and his Songs," by Gertrude Day, were well delivered, while Bdward O'Flynn closed the poetical selections by reciting with masical voice "The Day is Done."

Agatha Mannion in a few closing remarks paid a fitting "Tribute to Our Poet."

The programs were written on parchment Vellum, the cover bearing a small photo of the poet and the inscription, "An Hour with Longfellow." On the inside of front cover was the stanza.

Such songs have power to quiet

Such songs have power to quiet The restless pulse of care, And come like the benediction That follows after prayer,

On the back of cover was another quotation from the poet:

"I have but marked the place, But half the secret told. That, following this slight trace, Others may find the gold."

Others may find the gold."

Bach number of the program proper was accompanied by a choice quotation, and the whole presented a pretty and unique appearance.

Words of congratulation and encouragement were spoken at the close by Rev. Fr. James, Local Superintendent, Rev. Fr. Herman and Rev. Fr. Hubert; and the Rev. Superintendent agreeably surprised the pupils by presenting pretty rewards for the best written essays.

Orangeville, Feb. 28.—Early on Friday morning, Feb. 17,Alexander Robinday morning. Feb. 17. Alexander Robinson, a well-known citizen, died rather suddenly, and his death is at present being investigated by Coroner Henry and a jury. Several abrasions and contusions, one under the shoulder being 4 inches long by 2 inches wide, were found on the body, and the discovery of these prompted the legal enquiry. The inquest last evening continued until nearly midulent and again admits a property midulent and again admits a continued until nearly midulent and again and account and again again and again again and again aga til nearly midnight and again ad-journed until this evening. The pre-vailing suspicion is that the deceased was the victim of a brutal assault.
