

Quatrefoil, a four leaved flower, without a stem, unless blazoned slipped.

Queue, the tail of an animal; Queue fourchee, forked or double tailed.

Radiant, rayonnee, or rayonnant, having rays as the sun or a star.

Raguly, one of the partition lines; see text.

Rainbow, is conventionally represented as rising from a little cloud at each end.

Rampant, see text.

Rebated, cut off at the point.

Recercelée, curved back, see text, tit. crosses.

Reflected, or reflexed, turned back, e. g. a chain attached to a collar upon an animal and turned over his back, as with the unicorn in the Royal arms.

Reguardant, looking back.

Reindeer, in armory is conventional, a stag with attires or horns doubled.

Respectant, or respecting, two animals facing each other.

Rest, a musical instrument, see clarion.

Riband, a diminutive of the bend; see text.

Rising, describes a bird about to take flight.

Rose

Rose slipped

Rose, the rose is conventionally represented, usually with five petals, the barbs or ends of the green sepals showing between the petals, and seeded, but without stem or leaves unless specified. The rose as the badge of England is of three varieties, the Lancaster rose, red; the York rose, white; and the Tudor rose, which is one of the previous varieties charged upon the other of them.

Roundles, see text.

Rousant, describes a bird about to take flight.

Rustre, a lozenge circularly voided or pierced.

Sable, black; see text.

Salamander, a fabulous beast, drawn sometimes as resembling a dog and sometimes as a dragon without wings, emitting flames, and vert unless otherwise specified.

Salint, leaping or springing.

Saltire, or Saltier, an ordinary, see text.

Sanglier, the wild boar.