"Mr. Jesse Andrews."

"Good day, Ms. Andrews." was my prompt and civil greeting; "Lhave good news for you. Take a chair."

The good humored, rather intelligent, and somewhat clouded countenance of the new-comer brightened up at these words. "News from my consist. Archibald 2" he naked, as he seated him self.

self.

"Yes. He laments your late failure, and commiscrates the changed position and prospects of your wife and boy, little Archibald, his godon. You he has not much compassion for, inasmuch as he attributes your misfortunes entirely to mismanagement, and the want of common prudence."

"Candid, certainly," grambled out Mr. Jesse Andrews; "but an odd sort of good news!"

"His deeds are kinder than his words. He will allow, till Archibald attains his majority—Let me see: how old is that boy of yours now?"

"Ten. He was two years old when his godfather went to India."

"Ten. He was two years old when his godfather went to India."

"Well, then, you will receive two hundred pounds per annum, payable half-yearly, in advance, for the next ten years—this is, of course, if your son lives—in order to enable you to bring him up, and educate him properly. After that period has elapsed, your cousin intimates that he do not doubt, will do something for you, should you not by that time have conquered a fair position for yourself."

"Is that all ?" said Mr. Andrews.

"All! Why, what did you expect ?"

"Two or three thousand pounds to set me affoat again. I know of a safe speculation, that, with, say three thousand pounds capital, would realize a handsome fortune in no time."

Mr. Jesse Andrews, I may observe, was one of that nur erous class of persons who are always on the threshold of realizing millions—the only and constant obstacle being the want of a sufficient constant obstacle being the want of a capital."

I condoled with him upon his disappointment; but as words, however civil, avail little in the way of "capital," Mr. Jesse Andrews, having pockeded the first half-yearly instalment of the annuity, made his exit in by no means a gracious or grateful frame of mitd. ful frame of mit.d.

made his exit in by no means a gracious or grateful frame of mit.d.

Two other half-yearly payments were duly paid him. When he handed me the receipt on the last occasion, he said, in a sort of off-hand, careless way, "I suppose if Archy were to die, these payments would cease.

"Perhaps not," I replied unthinkingly. "At all events, not, I should say, till you and your wife were in some way provided for. But your son is not ill," I added.

"No, no; not at present," replied Andrews, coloring, and with a contusion of manner that sur prised me not a little. It flashed across my mind that the boy was dead, and that Andrews, in order not to risk the withdrawal or suspension of the annuity, had concealed the fact from us.

"Let me see," I reaumed: "we have your present address.—Norton Folgate, I think."

"Yes, certainly you have."

"I shall very likely call in a day or two to see Mrs. Andrews and your son."

to terminate the conference, "atter I nave seen Dr. Parkinson, and state whether we will or not nike proceedings against the insurance company on your behalt."

He thanked me, and hui ried off.

Dr. Parkinson confirmed Mr. Jesse Ardin wa in every particular. He had attended the boy, a fine-light-haire lad of eleven or twelve years of age, from not long after his setzure till his death. He suffered dreadfully, and died immistakably of Aristic cholers, and of nothing else: of which same disease a servint and female todger in the same house had died just previously. "It is of course," Dr. Parkinson remarked in conclusion," as unfortunate for the company as it is strangely lucky for Andrews; but there is no valid reason for retusing payment."

Upon this representation we wrote the next day to the assurance people, threatening proceedings on behalf of Mr. Jesse Andrews.

Early on the morrow one of the managing directors called on us, to state the reason which in luced the company to besitate at recognizing the plaintiff's claim. In addition to the doubt suggested by the brief time which had elayed from the date of the policy to the death of the child, there were several other slight-circumstances of corroborative suspicion. from the date of the policy to the death of the child, there were several other slight circumstances of corroborative suspicion. The chief of these was, that it neighbor had declared behaved the father indulgir; in obstrepulous mirth in a room adjoining that in which the corpse lay only about two hours after his son and expired. This unseemly, seandalous hilarity of her husband the wife appeared to faintly remonstrate against. The directors had consequently resolved son obstante Dr. Parkinson's declaration, who might, they argued, have been deceived, to have the body exhumed in order to a post-mortem examination as to the true cause of death, if the parents voluntarily agreed to this course, a judicial application to enforce it would be unnecessary, and all doubts on the matter could be quietly set at rest. I thought the proposal under the circumstances, reasonable, and called on Mr. and Mrs. Andrews, was, I thought, a good deal startled—shocked rather—a natural emotion perhaps.

"Who—who," he said after a few moments silent reflection—"who is to conduct this painful, sevolting inquiry. 197

"Who—who," he said after a few manests silent reflection—" who is to conduct this painful, revolting inquiry.?"

"Dr. Parkinson will be present, with Mr. Humphrey the surgeon, and Dr. Curtis the newly-appointed physician to the assurance office, in place of Dr. Morgan, who died, as you are aware, a short time since of cholers."

"True. Ah, well, theo," he answered almost with sharrity, "is it it sa they wish. Dr. Farkinson will see full play."

The examination was effected, and the result was a confirmation, beyond doubt as quithle, that death, as Dr. Parkinson had declared, had been solely occasioned by cholers. The assurance company still hesitated; but as this conduct could now be looked upon as perverse obstinacy, we served them with a writ at once. They gave in pand the môney was banded over to.
