Democracy at War

Lecture by

Frank Dixon

At Kentville Chautauqua

Which Opens July 31st.

One of the most interesting lecturers who will appear at the local Chautauqua is Frank Dixon, of New York. He was born in North Carolina after the Civil War, of Scottish parents, and graduated from the University of his native state. He taught school a year, entered the ministry, held pastorates in West Virginia, California and Connecticut and about twelve years ago became a Chautauqua lecturer where he at once achieved national distinction. Since that time he has filled an average of more than 150 lecture engagements a year in every section of the United States, returning to many towns and cities again and again.

This is Mr. Dixon's fifth season with the Swarthmore Chautauqua, and he is returning for re-engagements in practically every town.

The value of a lecture to any community lies largely in its challenge to fixed custom and established modes of thought. The moment a people becomes content with its achievements it begins to lose the power of action. The moment it ceases to create it begins to decay. To move only along the grooves of familiar thought is to invite brain paralysis. The lecturer must be the aggressor and call all men to give a reason for the convictions that they hold or abandon them for better.

Frank Dixon does this and more. He stirs the communities in which he lectures that something has to be done.

He has been well described as a radically conservative and conservatively radical. He is an orator with a wonderful personality. He is returned to the Chautauqua towns at almost a unanimous request from the towns.

This year his lecture, "Democracy at War," has been carefully prepared and it is a big, timely all-American constructive lecture.

Frank Dixon has spent the winter in France with our armies, as a special representative of the American Red Cross. He returns just in time to begin his Chautauqua season. He will have important things to say, something fresh and worth hearing.
