THURSDAY, JUNE 26.

BOUNCER DE BARRY.

It seems that somebody is after Bouncer De Barry, the energetic deporter of Canucks, who makes Buffalo a terror to the alien. Uncle Sam is just now thinking that perhaps a little business friendship with Canada might not be a bad thing for himself, and that portion of his territory in which Buffalo lies would benefit vastly from a reciprocal trade arrangement with Canada. Perhaps it is by reason of this fact that the Bouncer is being investigated. At all events he seems to be in trouble. The Buffalo Courier says: "The charges against Immigration Inspector John De Barry, who is probably the most cordially disliked resident of the United States by Canadians, have apparently assumed more serious proportions than originally outlined some weeks ago in the Courier. This one case, of an alleged assault, would probably not be weighed heavily against Buffalo's inspector, were it not for the fact that there have been other charges and objections, which have cumbered the files of the immigration bureau of the treasury department for several years. Mr. De Barry believes he has a good defense, but his very zealousness seems to have been his undoing. Still this, in the days of a strenuous government, under a strenuous president, and with a strenuous congress, passing strenuous acts, ought to be in favor of a strenuous immigration inspector, even in Buffalo."

LAYING THE PACIFIC CABLE.

Nearly all the grand projects that have been discussed at conferences of the statesmen of the empire at congresses of its business men, and at meetings of the British Empire League remain unrealized, says the Mail-Enterprise. Mutual preferential trade, a fast Atlantic service, the assimilation of the commercial laws of the Empire, a common system of defence—these are changes yet to be ushered in. There have been disappointments, delays, obstructions, but public opinion is nearing ripeness and their day is fast coming.

One great Imperial scheme, however, has passed out of the stage of speculation and is fast becoming a completed actuality. This is the all-British Pacific cable. The construction of that great link of empire is being rapidly pushed forward by the board which has charge of the work—a board consisting of three representatives of Great Britain, two of Canada, two of Australia, and one of New Zealand. Mr. Reynolds, the board's general manager, arrived a few days ago at Vancouver on his way to London. He says the cable is likely to be completed in November next, a month or two before the date specified in the contract with the Pacific Telegraph Construction and Maintenance Company. Mr. Reynolds' last work was at the Fiji Islands. At Suva, the capital of that group, he opened on the 23rd of April the spur to Norfolk Island, thus bringing Queensland, New Zealand, Norfolk Island and the Fiji into telegraphic connection. The completion of that part of the work has, he says, been followed by a great lowering of cable rates to Australian points. Norfolk Island is the centre of the constructed system. The spur from that island to the Fiji Islands on the north-east, is about 1,000 miles long; that from Norfolk Island to Australia on the west is 850 miles long; and from Norfolk Island to New Zealand on the south-east is 750 miles long. These lines, aggregating 2,600 miles, are reported by Mr. Reynolds to be very busy. The line from New Zealand to Queensland, via Norfolk Island, carries on an average 350 messages a day. Owing to the fact that three lines radiate from Norfolk Island, a very large station will be put up there, 80 acres of land being reserved at Anson Bay for the purpose. Some buildings are being put up there now by the New South Wales government.

At Doubtless Bay, the New Zealand landing place, the colonial government has erected some substantial cable buildings. None have gone up yet at Southport, the Queensland terminus, temporary offices having been rented there for station purposes. The two connections yet to be made are, first, that between the Fiji Island station and Fanning Island, on the north-east, about 2,000 miles in length, and, second, that between Fanning Island and Vancouver Island, a stretch of about 3,500 miles. The Anglia, the steamer from which the other lines have been built, is now on her way to London to load the Fiji-Fanning section, which she will begin to lay from Fanning Island. For the construction of the 3,500 miles between Fanning Island and Vancouver Island, a special steamer has been built, the Colonia. This is the largest cable steamer in the world, and it had need to be, for it is laying not only the longest, but also the thickest submarine wire in the world. The Colonia is expected to begin operations at Vancouver Island in September, and to get the other end of the cable attached at Fanning Island by the end of November at latest. In a considerably shorter time the Anglia will have spanned the gap between Fanning Island and the Fiji Islands. Though long, the section from Fanning Island to Vancouver Island is not likely to get as much out of repair as that between the Fanning and Fiji Islands, for the ocean bed in the former section is much the smoother. There was long delay in getting the great enterprise started, even after the parties to it were agreed upon it. In the first place, Sir Wilfrid Laurier objected to paying more than two-thirds of the cost, though it had been originally agreed that Canada should pay one-third. Then the intrigues of the Eastern Extension Telegraph Company seemed to prevail for a time in the British Cabinet itself, British Columbia became impatient and declared she would pay one-ninth of the cost herself sooner than see the project stopped. Finally the work was begun, and this year it will be finished.

The coronation procession in London with no King and no coronation will be like Hamlet with the chief character missing.—Mail-Enterprise.

Everybody was to have sung "God Save the King" this evening at eight o'clock, thus carrying the National Anthem around the world. The necessity is the stronger now, although the circumstances have changed.

PUNCTILIOUS COURTESY.

N. Y. Tribune.
The outlook for law and order in Ireland is improving. A home rule member of Parliament has just been sent to jail for contempt of court for calling a judge on the bench "a damned liar." After that, who shall charge the "most distressful country" with lack of punctilious courtesy?

ADVERTISING PAYS.

Hastings (Ont.) Star.
One of our local hotelkeepers advertised in our last issue for a wheelbarrow which had been taken from the hotel barn, with the customary warning "save further trouble as he is known," attached. The morning after the paper was published two wheelbarrows were found in the hotel yard. Who says advertising does not pay?
