ART SCHOOL PRIZE NIGHT.

Hamilton Declared to Have Best School in Province.

An Honor to the City and Useful Institution.

Prizes and Certificates Presented and Exhibition Opened.

There was a large attendance at the Hamilton Art and Technical School last night to witness the distrbiution of prizs to the successful competitors and to e the excellent work done by the students of that institution. In the absence of the president, Rev. Lyle, D. D., Mr. Adam Brown, vice-resident, took the chair. His address o the audience was full of vim and pirit in upholding the honor of the chool as an educational institution and voicing the merits of the work done by those in training there. Many young men and young women, who had gradu-ated from the school, had become illustrious in many parts of the United States and Canada, who were not only a credit to the institution, but to the city of Hamilton itself. He expressed wish that it might continue had done in the past to cultivate the higher tastes of the young people of the ty. Several other lovers and prominent Several other lovers and prominent men of airt also spoke.

Mr. C. W. Jefferys, vice-president of the Ontario Society of Artists, said the work in this school was well worth coming to see. The examples of work done were evidence of a live and active intelligence. The citizens of Hamilton might well command the continuance of the institution. He hoped the school would go on in all sincerity, as it had done in the past. He considered the work done past. He considered the work don showed more life and progress in here showed more life and progress in many ways than the school in Toronto to which he was attached. This, he thought, was the real live and active school of the province. If the citizens of Hamilton should drop it, they would be losing a distinction well worth posses-

ng. Mr. John Russell reiterated the state Mr. John Russell reiterated the statements made by the previous speakers. What the city fathers and the art men say are entirely two different things. The children of the city would enjoy art more than the fathers, because they (the children) are artists. He did not believe that a young country could afford to sacrifice art. It is a national inheritance and surely after 23 years of hard labor by a few they were not going to see the last of this work. The works on the walls of this school might well grace the traditional walls of two continents. He maintained that this was one of the best equipped art institutions of North America, and there is money enough in this city to carry it on.

one of the bees equipped at histitutions of North America, and there is money enough in this city to carry it on.

Mr. Acton Bond, one of the judges on architecture, said he had never seen in all the schools he had visited, in various parts of the world, as good results as in this one. He noticed that the audience was made up largely of ladies, who, he hoped, would prevail upon the city fathers to continue the grant. He noticed in visiting numerous are schools that those showing good results had strong men at the head and felt that the good results obtained in this school were largely due to the fact of having a strong presiding personality. He congratulated his hearers on having the man they had as principal, and advised them to do all they could to keep him and the school.

Art has a comercial as art school. Art has a comercial a mercialism has died out art still remains— the pictures of artists will live an through £1 ages. One of the men who was present, Mr. Russell, had done more to advertise the city than all the money spent by the citizens in making it the greater Hamilton. He had noticed the criticism against the work done by the school, but this always came from those who know least about it. Now that the opportunity was given those very people would not take the trouble to come and see the work done, which all people who are interested in the welfare of the city should do.

After his address he proceeded to present the prizes to the winners. The list is as follows:

Wright's Body Found.

Elk Lake, June 9.—Two prospectors returning from Bear Lake, named Chas. Reszell and Charles Cleary, discovered the body of young Wright, who was drowned a couple of weeks ago. They secured the remains with a piece of rope, tying it to a tree, and placed a notice saying they would notify the authorities in Elk Lake, which they did.

The less said about the age of a woman and canned goods the better.
