Signora Taglerino Complainant Against Giovanni Curto.

Christina Olman Gets a Term Behind the Bars.

Her Place In West End Has Been a Nuisance.

The Taglerinos, from 398 Sherman avenue north, are monopolizing a good deal of the time, lately, in Police Court This morning Signora Taglerino, wearing a pink shawl over a head of black hair an olive complexion, entered the ess box, waved her arms frantically and talked Sicilian volubly.

Mr. Searrone interpreted an intelli-gible story, which in brief was that Gio-vanni Curto called to see a friend of his at the Signora's house. The two friends adjourned to an upper room, but before Curto departed he entered her bedroom and withdrew $100 from a trunk, so said the Signora. Curto was charged with Signora. Curto was charged with

The police were notified and a warrant was issued, but when defendant learned of that, he gave himself up.

J. G. Gauld appeared for the defence, declined to elect, and pleaded not guilty.

Defendant was sent up for trial.

Over the bridge en route for three onths in the ethical institution on Bar ton street went Christina Olman, 31 Nev ton street went Christina Olman, 31 New street, for keeping a house of doubtful propriety: She pleaded not guilty. Many complaints lodged by neighbors to the police about the house, were the cause of it being raided on Saturday night by Sergeants Robinson and Bainbridge and a number of constables.

P. C's. Hill and Duffy had been watching the house for a long time, and read out a long list of calls that had been made by men on various evenings at short intervals.

made by men on various evenings at short intervals.

William H. Allen and Frank Osborne said many things that proved the absence of virtue in the house, and also told of sounds of revelry, accompanied by coarse and undignified language.

"Do you want to be sworn?" was asked the lady,
"I've got so cold I can hardly speak,"
However, she entered the box and disputed the veracity of the constables and other witnesses. She maintained she had many lady visitors and a few men relatives, but her story sufficed not to clear her, for the man at the bench of dispensation told her he believed she had kept a very bad house.

When the three months' sentence was handed out it three her in a high state of glee, for she replied: "Very much obliged; it won't break my heart."

"This way," said a constable, pointing to the bridge of sighs.

"Oh, I know the way," she retorted. She has crossed and re-crossed that bridge many times.

When Christ Johnston, 66 Cathcart street, took unto himself a wife, he sol-emnly vowed he would support her, but it is alleged he has been lax in his early promise, hence his being called to the bulwarks for non-support.

After a prolonged absence from the city he returned yesterday and called on his wife, who notified the police, and P. C's. Hill and Duffy went after him and, with a warrant in hand, were given a chase, which was a long and trying one, but resulted in the capture of the said Chris.

He was remanded till Wednesday. He was remanded till Wednesday, without being asked to plead. T. B. McQuesten appeared for defendant and arranged bail in the sum of $100.

Mrs. Johnston told his Worship this morning that last night somebody had called at her mother's house and offered to knock her head off if she appeared in the case. That matter may be investigated.

W. Smith, 15 Case street, stole a saw. Its intrinsic value was said to be 20 cents. Charles Chadwick was the complainant and said defendant had been working for him, but terminated his work here on Saturday and besides taking himself away took the saw. Crown Attorney Washington said the nawspaners were the cause of misinter.

He explained that his Worship referred only to things that his Worship referred only to things that grow on the earth, when taken from where they are growing, such as fruits, etc. Magistrate Jelfs asked Smith how he had been in the country. "Four months," was the answer.

"Do you know you could be deported for this?"

"Defendant said he did not think the thing was any value.

He was let go on deferred sentence, with an exhortation to live uprightly.

He left the court in company with his good-looking young wife and baby, and as they left the trio looked the embodi-ment of gladness.

"Before you pass sentence, your Wor-ship, I would like to make a statement," said the one-time eminent M. D. "No; please don't!" said the Magis-trate; "just pay $2."

Scott, wife of a baker of this city, was found in the woodshed of her home yesterday gagged and suspended by wrists from the rafters so that her toes just touched the floor. Sunday Evening Social Half Hour Proves Enjoyable.

An innovation in connection with First Methodist Church services which promises to be very popular with the congregation is the Sunday evening so-cial half-hour. The second of these was held last night, and enough of the people of the church remained for it to fill the held last night, and enough of the people of the church remained for it to fill the large schoolroom. The pastor said a few words, and all joined in a sacred song, after which they intermingled in a social way, and heard two delightful songs, "The Cross Is Not Greater Than the Crown," by Mr. Robert Cunningham, a rocent comer to the city, who has a beautiful tenor voice, and "At Even Ere the Sun Was Set," by Miss Zathleen Lanceley.
