The Crimson Rambler.

BY MUTH CAMERON.

I have just received a letter on the borderland between the pathetic and the amusing. The evidently sincere distress of the writer emboldens me to write upon a subject that does not often appear in print. By the way, let me mention that I do not see any reason for the bated breath with which you speak of this subject. "A bed bug," says Elbert Hubbard, "is all right except in its official capacity." Of course, no one likes to meet the "crimson rambler" (as some delicate person has named him) in his official capacity, but that is no reason why we should not openly discuss this way to exterminate him.

My reader friend says that her little boy has been sleeping in the living room this summer, that in some way "crimson rambler" were brought into the house and have infested the living room. She has tried very hard to get rid of them. She says: "It is quite a serious matter at any time but in one's parlor—you may imagine. I have prayed about the matter, so believe it is best to write to you. Have used gasoline."

Let me tell you my experience. You notice I am not ashamed to say that. Almost every housekeeper, no matter how good, has "crimson rambler" brought into her house once or twice in her lifetime. Now, it is no reflection whatever on her housekeeping if some member of the family gets one of these creatures on his clothes in the trolley, or if the unwelcome guests smuggle themselves in in the washing (that was my experience). And yet whenever the thing happens the unfortunate housewives act as if they were disgraced, and refuse to speak of the fatal subject above a whisper. To return to my experience, my reader friend says she used gasoline. So did I and it did no good, but that was because I used it spasmodically. One day I sprayed the bed and left the closet untouched, the next day vice versa. Then one day, I started on a thorough campaign. I bought an atomizer, such as one uses to spray one's throat (forty cents) and a gallon of gasoline. With these I went to work and sprayed every nook and corner in the room, including the picture moulding, the cracks between the base-board and the floor, etc., etc. Then I sprayed every piece of furniture, inside and out, including the bureau drawers; then the closet, taking every garment out and looking it over thoroughly. The bed and mattress, of course, received special attention.

The campaign took one helper and myself the whole of one day, but it was time saved in the end, for I never found a live "crimson rambler" after that day.

The atomizer is important. It throws a strong stream which penetrates into the cracks. Remember to air out thoroughly before fighting a match in the room. I suppose I should admit that the plague had not progressed far before I made this stand. This treatment might not avail if the "crimson rambler" had got a good head start. I have since been told that an excellent treatment for a serious case is to burn sulphur or some powerful disinfectant in the room. Several people have told me that this is most efficacious and does not hurt the paint, but at present I am not able to recommend it from personal experience. And I must say I hope I never shall be.

Fashions and Fads.

The vogue for plaid continues. Small hats seem to be preferred. Fur scarfs are longer and wider. The most becoming of veils is of blue.

Flowers adorn some of the newest hats. Sashes are as much in favor as tunics. The barrel muff is gaining in popularity.

The corsage bouquets seem to grow larger. The chignon waists in all shades are fashionable.

There is a tendency in evening gowns to glitter.

Hats are not worn quite so far down on the head. The new dances call for short skirts and full ones.

Sweaters are dazzling with their vivid brilliancy of color. Street costumes of velvet grow more and more elaborate.

One does not see many ostrich plumes on the smartest hats. The blouses of wash tulle are very inexpensive and durable.

Negligés of chiffon, crepe de chine or net are fur-trimmed. Fur stoles are of good length, with diagonal or oval-shaped ends.

Many small furs are made of mole-skin, ermine and chinchilla. Lingerie is fashioned of Japanese silk, crepe de chine or entirely of lace.

The combination of flowers and fur in some of the hats is most charming. Some of the evening slippers show a narrow line of fur about the top.

One of the newest Parisian fads is the petticoat to match the figured vest.

The bishop sleeves of transparent material are much used on afternoon frocks.

The smartest shirtwaist this fall is washable, but it must not be starched. The sleeves of the strictly tailored suits show little or no fullness at the armholes.

Reindeer Have Escaped.

The efforts of the Interior Department to propagate the raising of reindeer in the Peace River country have not been attended by much success.

The animals have stampeded and taken to the tail timbers.

Fifty were brought from Labrador the suggestion originating with Dr. Grenfell. It was thought they would be of utility for transportation and domestic purposes. A report just received states that twelve died en route and twenty-six broke away from the corral last year and eight this year. Only four remain.

Efforts are being made to catch some of the deserters and place them on an island.

It Will Have to Do Things

"The aristocracy of the future—the privileged class—will probably be composed of healthy, handsome, not wildly intelligent persons," says Miss Cecily Hamilton in the Daily Mail.

"In the beginning no privileged class has founded its claim upon birth; in the beginning—so far—every privileged class has founded its claim upon achievement. The first war-lords and the first merchant princes started life on a par with their fellow: it was only their descendants who looked back with pride on their parentage. And the rule seems to be that when an aristocracy, in the course of generations, comes to rely on its birth, it ceases to achieve, the world in general has no further use for it, and, sooner or later, abolishes it."

"The eugenist is backed by human experience when he works for the creation of his form of over-man. But he will do well to remember that, if his super-healthy class is to count, it will have to do more than be born and be stout and well-looking. It will have to be bred for more than beauty. It will have to be bred for more than beauty. In short, it will have to do things. For, if it does not, the people who can be they pale, be they pock-marked, be they hairless, be they hideous—will arise and do things to it!"

Special Evening Telegram.

OTTAWA, To-day. The return on Sunday of Premier Borden from his holidays in the south was followed by a series of cabinet meetings, directed especially to a preparation of the sessional programme. The legislation to be considered included the Naval question Bill and one respecting Trust and Loan Companies, Revision of Merchant Shipping Act, a consolidation of the Railway Acts and certain amendments designed to increase the autonomy of municipalities.

LEEDS, To-day.

Asquith's speech at the meeting of the National Liberal Federation was eagerly awaited, because it was expected to throw light on the question of how far negotiations for a settlement of Home Rule by agreement had been successful. It disappointed those who were sanguine of a peaceful issue. I should be deceived myself, he said, if I said that I saw at this moment a prospect of agreement, but it cannot occur with those who say time is being or has been wasted. The Prime Minister declared there was no foundation for the statement that on this or any other matter the Cabinet was divided. With regard to possible settlement by consent, he held it should be carried on beyond the reach of the electorate or Parliamentary necessity, otherwise the other question would continue to be the football of Party politics to the infinite injury of both Ireland and the United Kingdom as a whole. It was in this spirit said Asquith, that he took upon himself to invite not a conference of party leaders, but free and unprejudiced interchange of views and suggestions. There was no reason to despair, regarding the acceptance of the invitation by the leaders of the Opposition. "The Government was not going to make either its own initiative or suggestion of others any surrender of principle, but it had closed any door on a reasonable way to peace. There was no ground whatever, he declared, for a demand made by the Conservatives for a general election. It could not be fought on the single issue of Home Rule, and could not result in a settlement of the question. So far as he was concerned he would not advise any such course, the Government was determined to give Home Rule to Ireland and was not going to be frightened or arrested by the menaces of civil war. The Prime Minister also disapproved some pronouncement from him indicating a prospect of decrease of vast expenditure for armaments, concerning which much dissatisfaction has been expressed among Liberals recently. He and every one of his colleagues in the Government, he said, lamented the huge diversion all over the world of National wealth into non-productive channels. A military, which out of wantonness or levity, in a burst of vain glorious rivalry, added as much as a pound to expenditure for that purpose was committing a National crime. They could not plead guilty to that reproach, they were charged with a solemn trust and in its performance it was their duty to maintain a vigilant watch on what the rest of the nations were doing and be constantly ready to see that the problem could be met by co-operation of great powers of the world brought about by demands of the people.

Roofing As Attractive in Price—As in Color

You'll admit this roof looks attractive—in distinctive colors of red or green. But for most home builders its chief attraction lies in its remarkable economy. Let's begin with its first cost. NEPONSET Prostate Roofing costs less to buy than good shingles. Greatly reduces the cost of repairs. No shingles to split, crack or "curl up." Remember, the shingles of today aren't the shingles of 20 years ago. NEPONSET Prostate Roofing makes a water-tight blanket. And best of all, resists fire—is "spark-proof." Its protection from fire-hazard alone is worth all its cost. Its first cost is its only cost, too. Can you afford NOT to have NEPONSET Prostate Roofing on your roof?
