On Forgiving Our Rivals.

By RUTH CAMERON.

Pull It Up By the Roots.

"And so Miss Margaret is going to buy an automobile. Well, I hope she'll never have cause to regret it."

"Miss Margaret" the tone of the speaker's voice, especially the tone in which she said it, was an unmistakable contradiction of her words. She didn't hope Miss Margaret wouldn't have cause for regret. On the contrary!

"Miss Margaret" is the daughter of a neighbor. She is a highly successful young business woman of about the same age as the speaker's daughter, and formerly a school friend. The latter, as you may already suspect, is not a successful young business woman. And that is why her mother speaks with spiteful emphasis of Miss Margaret and charitable hopes for the worst.

As Bad As the Fury of a Woman Scorned.

Hell may hold no fury to be compared with that of the woman scorned, but earth holds another resentment at least as intense, and that is the resentment of failure for success.

When you can see no good in anything a certain person does—

When you find your lip curling and a tone of sarcasm creeping into your voice as you speak of him—

When you feel depressed and resentful at hearing of his good fortune—

Look out!

Or rather, look in! Search your heart and see if you are not letting this deadly nightshade among emotions get root within it.

If you find it there, either make up your mind that you are willing to have it choke out such good and gracious growths as justice, friendliness and generous admiration, or set your teeth and pull it out by the roots.

The bitterness of many a humble heart is not in its own humility, not in its own deprivations, but in some one else's grandeur, someone else's possessions. And this is especially true when the someone else is one who has once been a neighbor, a schoolmate or a co-worker.

"I do admire Lucille," someone said to me the other day about a girl who has married money. "She is so generous and nice to all her old friends. She is continually inviting them to her home or taking them out in her machine."

Easier to Forgive Failure Than Success.

Now without doubt Lucille is better than the snobs who desert their old friends in their struggle for advancement. And yet it does not seem to me that the virtue Lucille shows is such a difficult one. She has a lovely home and a stunning auto. The old friends whom she entertains cannot help envying and admiring, and envy and admiration make a pleasant atmosphere for their object.

I do not think Lucille's virtue is comparable to that of the man or woman who can keep on friendly terms with a successful rival, can meet him without either cringing or carrying a chip on his shoulder, can praise his successes and never seek to detract from them, and can even keep from harboring any feeling of resentment.

That is surely "a task for all a man has of fortitude and delicacy."

Question—Do you think a girl is of age to do what she chooses at eight?

Answer—No, indeed I do not. Nor at twenty-eight. Nor at eighty. In other words, we are never at liberty to do what we choose without respect to the wishes and happiness of those who love us. A girl of eighteen is old enough to have her wishes respected by her parents and to respect theirs in return.

Antipon in Canada.

SPREADING THE FAME OF THE GREAT BRITISH SPECIFIC FOR RAPID FAT-REDUCTION.

The burden of obesity is so distressing and so unappealing, and is generally so difficult to get rid of with any degree of permanency, that the introduction to Canada of the famous British Specific Antipon will be welcome in many quarters. The preparation is not unknown here already, but the obstacles in the way of its supply to the general public were necessarily great. All difficulties are now removed.

Ere the important discovery of Antipon the treatments usually employed for the reduction of weight included starvation dietary rules, sweating and purging, together with mineral dragging. All these things are weakening in the extreme, and when obstinately persisted in, lead to the constitution. Antipon is diametrically opposed to such drastic methods.

To expel the superfluous fatty matter from the system is all very well, but the body must be amply nourished at the same time. Now, Antipon not only rapidly eliminates the excess of fat, but overcomes the unfortunate tendency to "run to fat." Ample wholesome food therefore becomes Antipon's strength-giving ally, and there is no need to dread that the extra nourishment taken will bring about a re-development of excessive fatty tissue.

Every dose of Antipon is a sure step in the direction of the recovery of beauty of form and vigorous nervous energy.

The decrease of weight is not a tedious process. Within twenty-four hours of the first dose there is a reduction varying, according to individual conditions, between 2 to 3 lb. The scales will be the unerring recorder. The daily decrease is eminently satisfactory. When normal weight and symmetrical proportions are regained the treatment is no longer necessary.

Antipon contains only the most harmless vegetable substances in solution, the liquid being in appearance like a light red wine. It is palatable, refreshing and slightly tart, and never occasions any unpleasant reactionary effects.

Antipon can be obtained at all drug stores, from stock or order, or in case of any difficulty a large case will be forwarded direct from the Antipon Laboratories, Store Street, London, W.C. Eng., carriage paid, on receipt of remittance for 5 dols. 11c.

THE CULTURED CHILD.

WALT MASON

How sharper than a serpent's tooth it is to be the dead of an obdurate, cultured youth, an educated lad. You labored with the farming tool, and spent a vast amount, that Clarence Claude might go to school, and drink at learning's fountain. And now, that you are old and bent, no comfort do you know, for when you mutter "I have went," proud Clarence shrieks with woe. "Come off your perch, oh, Father John," says Clarence, grim as fate; "the proper phrase is 'I have gone'—why don't you get it straight?" And when you mutter, "I have saw," the crime's too rank for peers; you hit poor Clarence on the raw, he sheds unmanly tears. At last your tongue has ceased to clack; you now refuse to talk, through deadly fear that you will back poor Grammar off the walk. Sometimes you argue with the mules, since children are a frost, or ask the horses if the schools are worth all that they cost. But in the house you close your trap, for if you say a word, young Clarence Claude, that cultured chap, will be profoundly stirred.

Flaxseed tea is useful when the children have a cold. Wash two table-spoonfuls of the seed, wash four cups of water, cook slowly for an hour, add lemon juice and sugar and strain.

Durango's Captain

WAS IN STEAMER MOBILE WHICH WAS DESTROYED BY SUBMARINE.

The Furness liner Durango is expected to get away from Halifax some time this afternoon. Capt. Fortune is now temporarily master of that ship, replacing Capt. Chambers, who is well known on the Newfoundland route and is now on a well earned vacation. Capt. Fortune was last in command of the ill-fated s.s. Mobile, which was torpedoed off the coast of Scotland recently. Commenting on an interview with the captain an exchange says: "The ship was sunk on April 26th off the coast of Lewis, Scotland, by one of the most modern of German's underwater craft. She was a very large and powerful submarine," said Capt. Fortune, "and had a speed of twenty-two knots, far more than my ship could attain." He would not say where the Mobile was holed at the time nor where she was from. The steamer, which belongs to the Furness Line, was on Admiralty service and was used as a transport, though she had no troops on board when the submarine encountered her. The Mobile was thirty miles off the north coast of Scotland and the officers were at lunch when a submarine, hove in sight across her bows, although some distance away. An officer of the submarine ordered the crew of the Mobile to leave their ship and, as there was no other course of action open to them, they did so. The boats were lowered and put away from the Mobile.

Capt. Fortune and the men in his lifeboat were then ordered to go alongside the submarine and were taken on board. The Germans placed bombs in the boat and rowed it over to the Mobile. They clambered up the ship's sides and placed the explosives in her holds. The lifeboat was then rowed back to the submarine and Captain Fortune and his men were told to get back again. This they did. The bombs on the ship exploded and the submarine disappeared.

The lifeboats, which contained 24 men all told, then set out for the distant shore. By rowing and the use of the sails they made land safely. Captain Fortune says that he could not make out the number of the submarine but that she was very long and evidently one of the latest that Germany has produced.

The Mobile was a ship of 1,165 tons net.

Stop Crying Out For More

(By Major-General Sir A. Plain Words on a Much-Disputed Question.

It is very easy to abuse and criticize, especially by irresponsible people who, as a rule, know nothing about the real merits and demerits of the object of their attack.

No department in the public war service has met with such violent vituperation as that of the Censor. People are given to complain that the Censor withholds information from the public which would stir them up to greater enthusiasm in case of successes, and to more grim determination to bring Germany down to her knees in case of those temporary reverses which must take place from time to time.

It must be remembered, however, that this country is literally saturated with spies, Germans and pro-Germans, which are not confined to any one nationality, and that there are numerous sources through which every scrap of information that can be of the slightest utility to the enemy is freely conveyed to them.

These facts show that the office of Censor and the suppression of information are two most important factors at the present time.

English Newspapers go to Germany.

It must be remembered that all the leading English newspapers find their way to Germany, as those of Germany do here. Further, the German General Staff employ a staff of experts to study carefully all enemy newspapers and point out the very smallest assertions which may bear in any way upon the conduct of the war.

Again, their manipulation of a great part of the Press in America is unbounded, and anything whatsoever that may be detrimental to our interests or to those of our Army in the field and our Navy would be made the most of. Therefore, it is manifestly important that they receive no help in this direction from us.

It has been said that there is too much censoring of soldiers' letters. But the most disastrous results might accrue from an apparently innocent statement in correspondence.

For instance, a private sent home to his people a letter which appeared in one of the daily papers, and was headed with his regimental number, the name of his regiment, no town or place mentioned, but just simply giving the address of the British Expeditionary Force.

In this letter he told his parents that his regiment was in very comfortable quarters in a town somewhere in France, quite close to a picturesque old church, and a stream running through the town, where they went every morning for a dip.

This letter was taken by the German Intelligence Department; they knew the town in which this regiment was quartered, and the information regarding the particular part of the
