Carnot's Royal Reception at Nice. Paris, April 25 .- President Carnot eived an ovation at Nice yesterday. He received an ovation at Nice yesterday. He reviewed the Alpine troops in the presence of Grand Duke Nicholas, the Crown Prince and Princess of Sweden, the King and Queen of Saxony and the Prince and Princes of Monaco. The President received a wreath from the Society of Natives of A succelborraine, and the Mazzini and Garibaldi Clubs united in doing him homage. There was a grand banquet in the evening, after which the Presidential party attended the opera. The day ended with Venetian fete, illuminations and general testivities.

VIENNA, April 25.-Later reports from Baila, Galicia, show that the first statement regarding the number of persons killed was exagerated. It has now been learned that only three anti-Semitic rioters were killed and twelve wounded. The troops at first used blank cartridges in firing upon the mob, but as t.is d.h not result in dispersing them ball cartridges were used. Ten leaders of the rioters were arrested and swill be tried. The origin of the outbreak is a mystery. There is no strike there. The rioters were armed with pickaxes I and pressed the military hard. Two revolver shots were fired at the soldiers then charged amid a shower of stones and bottles from windows and roofs a son eighboring houses. The bayonets not seeming to frighten the infuriated mob the troops were ordered to load with ball cartridge, and two rounds were fired. The mob broke under fire, and dispersed in all directions. declare Istone on the Land Rill the debate on the Land Purchase Billi in the House of Commons last evening. He said he opposed the bill under an over-whelming conviction that it was complicated, without undertaking to solve the difficulty. He was disappointed when Mr. Baliour stated the measure pledged the country to the extent of £33,000,000, without mentioning the possibility of further out mentioning the possibility of further amounts being asked. Mr. Parnell's plan was new in principle. Its general purpose was clear, but he was not certain that he prehended the details. (Conservative comprehended the details. (Conservative laughter.) It was honorable, even chivalrous, is Mr. Parnell, opposing the Government as he did, to purpose an alternative. He strongly sympathized with one object of Mr. Parnell's plan, whereby the landlordswould not be expatriated, but would be retained. It would be a sorrowful conclusion of the life of the landlord class if, when local government was extablished. clusion of the life of the landlord class if, when local government was established in Ireland, they did not take part in adjusting affairs. Mr. Balfour's bill presented a number of dubious points. Some of the proposals were so obviously objectionable as to justify their rejection. A bill of this kind should not encourage landlords to become buyers of land in order to take advantage of the enormous bonus offered. Hear, hear.) The provision respecting two years' arrears also required a justification which it would be difficult to find. (Cheers.) He took the strongest objection to placing an embargo upon the local funds two years arrears also required a justification which it would be difficult to find. (Cheers.) He tock the strongest objection to placing an embargo upon the local funds of countes. (Hear, hear.) The proposal violated aprincipal which the House ought to hold sacred. The only really available and valuable guarantees provided in the measure were grants from the imperial exchequer on account of probate duties and other public charges. The Government had already given England and Scotland similar grants, placing them wholly at the disposal of the local authorities. Was it possible the Government would tell the country must be used for the benefit of persons contracting under the bill? (Cheers.) It was a violation of equality governing the three kingdoms than which he never knew a more glaring instance. Coming to the "constitutional objections," any one of which, he asserted, formed an absolute reason against the second reading of the bill, Mr. Gladstone urged it was obvious that frehand opposed the measure, as five-sixths of the Irish members deliberately and determinedly opposed it. (Cheers.) As the Government was going to make Ireland its debtor it was important to consider the attitude of the person about to be subjected to go in view of what the Judge India of the J ism implied the use of soldiers against the tenant; the use of every weapon of the State to enforce an unpopular law. It was a sad disappointment to find, under the name of a voluntary arrangement between landlord and tenant, a device for bringing an irrestible pressure upon the tenant with a view of exhorting for the landlord's benefit nearly the whole of the immense boon that Parliament might confer. Mr. Gladstone said these objections covered only a part of this measure, which was probably the most complicated he had ever seen. In conclusion he said: "I feel it to be my absolute duty to protest against the principles of a grant of such a character, and so tending to embark the country in an immense pecuniary venture, while making land purchase not an aim in the settlement of the general Irish problem, but a means to further.

mense pesuniary venture, while making land purchase not an aim in the settlement of the general Irish problem, but a means to further plange us into the deepest political embarrasments." (Cheers.)

Messrs. Goschen and Russell defended and Mr. Dillon opposed the bill. Mr. Dillon said he did not in all respects approve Mr. Parnell's alternative, but it was the scheme of the only man possessing power to settle the question.

The attendance was small, and there was a marked lack of enthusiasm, which some of the speakers tried to stir up by referring to the perfect organization of the Reformers and the urgent necessity of the Conservatives to go and do likewise. LATER REPORT.

SHELBURNE, April 25.—The triple tragedy enacted yesterday morning at the Morrison homestead is still the topic of conversation. Until to-day there appeared no happier family in the township of Melancthon. Morrison, the poor, demented murderer, is the possessor of a good farm, free from all encumbrance, and was in fact very well off. He enjoyed the respect of all his neighbors and is well connected. This evening he lies in a darkened room, hanging between life and death, with the mark of Cain on his brow. In the next room are the bodies of his three little children, murdered by his own hand. At the back of the bed lies the eldest of the dead children, a bright little girl named Arabella, 7 years of age. At the front is Thomas James, 5 years of age, and between the two lies William Edgar, aged 2 years.

A TALK WITH THE MOTHER.

The heart-broken mother is an intelligent woman about 35 years of age, being much younger than her husband, whose age is given as 54. Mrs. Morrison spoke in kindly terms with reference to her husband. She said he was a kind husband and an indulgent father, and she could not imagine what led him to commit such a terrible crime. The said he had been ill during the past month, and that very often he was despondent and would tell her that he could not recover. He had never been confined to bed, but appeared to be melancholy and complained about a pain in his head. Last week he told his wife that he was troubled about what would become of the three youngest children in case anything happened to them. He evidently had the idea that he was leaving property enough to support his wife and the two eldest children, and called the problem by murdering his he was leaving property enough to support his wife and the two eldest children, and solved the problem by murdering his favorites.

THE FATHER.

Dr. Norton examined the unhappy man's pulse, and while doing so Morrison said:

"Doctor, don't be bothering me. I am going soon. You cannot do me any good."

He then spoke in a louder tone: "Oh, doctor you are hurting me. Don't? I am going down, down, the last three weeks, and all the medicine you could pour into me would do me no good." Dr. Norton then asked him the following questions:

"Tom, do you remember what you did last night?"

"Was it before daylight that you went up the road to John Standtord's?"

"Do you remember seeing John Lindsay last night?"

To all these questions no reply whatever was made. Dr. Norton then told him that he was in a serious condition. He said:

"You may recover, but the probabilities are that you will not," and urged him if he the time. There was no response.

Disastrous Results of the Mississippi's Overflow—Hundreds of Lives in Peril.

BAYOU SARA, April 25.—The real condition of things in the overflowed district is just coming to light. No pen can picture the devastation of the country or the desolation of the people. The entire front of Pointe Coupee is under water. The water back of the levees is so deep that hundreds of lives are in jeopardy. The small stretches of levee still standing are crowded with men, women and children side by side with horses, mules and cows. In an old raised gin house 500 negroes were found huddled together. The condition of the unfortunate blacks was pitiable. The crevasse at Allendale will overflow 30 of the finest plantations on the river. The damage is inscallable.

THOUSANDS OF STOCK HAVE BEEN BROWNED, and it is quite probable human life has been sacrificed. Standing on the deck of the relief steamer Dacotah as she passed within 50 yards of the flooded district the extent of the disaster could be seen. Grouping together on the little knolls between broken levees; through which the water rushed with ungovernable furry, were scores of people, white and black, some with babies in arms. Many had nothing in the world except the clothes they wore. Whenever the Dacotah discovered a scene like this the stage was swung out and the stricken ones taken aboard. A council of war was neid, and it was determined that the men should take turn about in caring for the "kids" while Williams went to the polls. An attempt was made to carry this into execution, but the infants set up such a howl of protest that the poor man was left to his fate.—[Albany Journal.]
