A Friend of Scott.

LONDON, Aug. 22.-The death of Mr. James Stillie, the well-known Edinburgh book collector and bibliographer, severs the last remaining link which connected the literary world of the "Great Unknown" the literary world of the "Great Unknown" with that of to-day. Mr. Stille, who was apprenticed to the Ballantynes, frequently saw Scott, as he was intrusted with the conveyance of proofs to Abbotsford—a tribute to the esteem in which he was held, as the utmost secrecy was then preserved as to the authorship of the Waverley movels. The manuscripts were all copied after they left Scott's hands, and one of after they left Scott's hands, and one of after they left Scott's hands, and one of them, "Rob Roy," was copied by George Stillie.

James Stillie started in business in 1825, and it was only within the last two years that he gave up regular attendance at his shop. Archibald Constable was his first customer. Sir Walter Scott, for whom Mr. Stillie had a profound admiration, and of whom he used to tell a number of ancedotes, also frequently purchased rare works from him. Mr. Stillie's business was confined entirely to old books and manuscripts, and in antiquarian and bibliogreconfined entirely to old books and seripts, and in antiquarian and bibliographical circles few men were better known. In the course of his 68 years of business life he met with a great number of business and other celebrities. Mr. Glad-last night attacked the French consulate and smashed every window in the building. The escutcheon of France over the doorway was torn down and taken possession of by some of the mob. An attempt was then made to burn it, but the police drove the rioters off. Some of the officers espied the escutcheon and rushed into the crowd and recaptured it. This attack is likely to further complicate the trouble. There was a renewal of the rioting at Genoa to-day, during which an omnibus was wrecked.

PARIS, Aug. 22.—Signor Ressmann, Italian ambassador to France, had another interview this morning with M. Dupuy, Prime Minister and Minister of Foreign Affairs. This evening M. Dupuy will receive the mayor of Aigues-Mortes, who has been called upon to make a full report as
