Sir Richard Cartwright's Effective Reply to Mr. Foster's Criticisms.

An Opposition Collapse-How Debate On the Address Petered Out-In the Commons.

Ottawa, Feb. 6.-Last evening it took Sir Wilfrid Laurier 7,5 minutes completely to outline the policy of the government, and to answer the threehour effort of Sir Charles Tupper. And this afternoon Mr. George E. Foster consumed two hours and a half in presenting his views. Sir Charles yesterday applied himself to the business of giving a free advertisement to La Patrie, the newspaper owned by the sons of Mr. Tarte. Today Mr. Foster did the same thing.

MR. FISHER'S PAMPHLET. Mr. Foster made the charge against Hon. Sydney Fisher of having circulated a pamphlet on which the mapie leaf had been printed. This pamphlet had been franked by Mr. Fisher, and the whole affair was denounced as ne-the commissioners from the British Island of Trinidad, spent ten days in Ottawa discussing a project for increasing our trade with the island. It has also been mentioned that Mr. W. G. Parmelee has returned from the British West Indies, where he discharged a similar mission. So satisfactory have been the early results of these two efforts to promote trade with our tropical kinsmen that mention was made of the matter in the speech from the throne. This infuriated Mr. Foster, who, when maica, and came home empty-handed. -3 o'clock. Preparatory service on Sir Wilfrid Laurier's government made no such mistake. The administraship Company, whereby the frequency of the steamship transports was douisland governments were begun, and so far the indications of success are promising. Dire rage was displayed by Mr. Foster because the government, as inspeech from the throne. It was out-rageous, he thought, and said, that the government should mention the negotiations after no less a personage than himself had tried to do the same thing and had failed. After a parallel pro-test was lodged by Mr. Foster because the administration had mildly pointthe administration had mildly point-ed out that two cents was all that the Canadian citizens need pay the post-office department for carrying a onethis, Mr. Foster evidently believed, was preposterous. Once upon a time, he pointed out it had cost five cents to post a Canadian letter to a Canadian point. Any government who took credit for cutting down letter postage was worth, not of praise, but of conviction for larceny. Mr. Foster annou with some irrelevance, that the Con-servative press was not feeding at the public trough, to which Dr. Landerkin shot back the apposite remark that the said trough had been nearly empty when Mr. Foster had resigned his charge of it. Mr. Foster also announce ed that Sir Charles Tupper had never called the French-Canadians disloyal. The finish of the speech consisted of a charge that Sir Wilfrid Laurier had said in his speech last night that the Boers, when su jugated, would receive the same "rights of murder and rapine which they now possess." Of course, what Sir Wilfrid Laurier did say was that they would receive the same civil rights as the Dutch colonists have been given, but Mr. Foster, starting on the mentioned mis-statement, became ve-hemently eloquent on the question.

And then came the cheers. THE OPPOSITION COLLAPSE. After dinner an amazing thing happened. To drop a metaphor, the debate on the address, a debate that was to be the precursor of a five or six months' session, petered out ignominiously. Sir Richard Cartwright turned the Maxim gun of his criticism upon the two speeches of Sir Charles and Mr. Foster. And when Sir Richard's fusillade stopped, the determination of the opposition to continue the debate was a thing of shreds and patches. So utterly torn and destroyed was it that man on the Conservative side arose to continue the debate, and the address in reply to the speech from the throne was carried without a dissen-

> Backache, lame back and complicated kidney ailments can only be per-manently cured when both the kidneys and liver are set right

For this reason no remedy was ever so successful as Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills in curing diseases of the kidneys and liver, backache, lame back, lumbago and rheumatism. Mr. Geo. Grant, 2 York street, London, Ont., says: "I had suffered with lame back and kidney troubles for three years, had different doctors and all to no avail. I heard of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, began to use them, and am proud to say that I now feel like a new man. I would like all sufferers with lame back to know of this cure, for I can sympathize with them."
Mr. W. D. Wilson, Center street,
London West, Ont., says: "I was troubled with kidney disease and scalding sensations, and suffered much.
After trying many medicines without finding a cure, I was induced to try Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. They worked like a charm. I can now sleep all night through without inconveni-ence, and consider myself cured."

Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are well known in London and vicinity, where they have effected many man-velous cures. tient voice. There was no vote—no desire to have a vote. The House of Commons unanimously said that all that the government has done in the recess was all that the country required. A review of ancient history on the part of Sir Charles, anger in the part of Mr. Foster, because the government is essaying to remedy the failures and the neglect of the Conservatives, these furnished the tenuous backbone of the speeches of the two men who must inevitably be considered to outrank in acumen and debating ability and breadth of mind their followers who sit around them. In the Queen's speech there are eighteen questions upon which an amendment might have been moved. There was no amendment, and at the Conservative caucus this morning the opposition unanimously decided that it would be worse than useless to move an amendment. worse than useless to move an amend-ment. The general way was that any amendment would simply put the party in a worse case with the country. The best was made of a bad job. SIR RICHARD CARTWRIGHT'S SPEECH.

Compared with the average speech heard in the House of Commons, Sir Richard's was marvelous. In an hour Richard's was marvelous. In an hout the minister of trade and commerce held the weakness of the opposition's case up to the bright light of day. He asked why they had not moved in former years for the repeal of the preferential tariff, which they have so continuously denounced, and suggested that when the subsidies should be that when the subsidies should be brought down they move to strike out any that they thought unwarrantable. Last session the opposition, it will be remembered, laid no finger upon them, inasmuch as last session and the session before, for that matter, both Sir Charles and Mr. Foster vanished after delivering their speeches. As for the government's action in respect to the contingents, Sir Richard accentuated the strength of the government's case by showing that in addition to the peculir circumstances surrounding the dispatch of our troops, the integrity of the empire had been threatened. British territory must be preserved inviolate from the Boers. Sir Richard echoed the views expressed by Hon. David Mills regarding the federation of

AN IMPERIAL CONSTITUTION

Hon. David Mills on Its Gradual Development Within the British Empire-The Senate. Ottawa, Feb. 6.-In the senate this afternoon Hon. David Mills made a notable speech on the question of the sending of the Canadian contingents to South Africa. In relation to the development of an imperial constitu-tion he recalled the situation in 1885, when Sir John Macdonald had said that Canada could not send one man to help Great Britain in Egypt or spend one dollar in equipping a force. that the government of that day did was to offer to allow enlistment in Canada for the army. Continuing, Hon. Mr. Mills said: "There is a change in the view which the people of the empire take, and in so far as that ounce letter to any point in Canada or change of public sentiment has octange of public sentiment has octanged by the public sentiment has octan change of public sentiment has oc-curred I recognize the difference; but I vative Government then to under-take the work as it has been open to us now, and it would have been accepted by the imperial government if the offer had been in proper form then, I say, then, it does not rest with the opposition to charge the government In my opinion we are having gradually maybe unsystematically, developed within the British empire an imperial constitution. The British Government has governed the United Kingdom as a domestic parliament, as we govern Canada, and it has in addition to that the power of an imperial government and an imperial assembly. That is gradually undergoing a change. Everybody sees that in 1887, when the imperial government asked the Canadian government to settle the difficulties between Canada and the United States, they were giving this country a position in an imperial assembly, and an of-fice in the settlement of an imperial question, and so recently, when there was an attempt made to settle the difficulties between this country and the United States, the imperial government named four Canadian commissioners and an eminent jurist from the United Kingdom to represent the British Empire, and so we had a voice in deter-mining a question which might be of peace or war. No man in his senses would undertake to frame for the British Empire a constitution and say it should be governed by one or two legislative bodies or a political body, or what its powers should be. It is only by the voluntary act and good sense and co-operation of the government of the United Kingdom and the governments of the different dependencies that you can gradually develop an imperial constitution suited to the requirements of an empire such as ours. The imperial government trusts us in these questions, and they trust us with the purpose of settling the difficulties of an international character, and we can trust her in determining what is just and fair and right between the British people of South Africa and the people of the Transvaal. She trusted us, we trust her, and this empire is an empire governed by the mutual confidence of the people who inhabit its different portions. No doubt in time an imperial constitution will grow up, just as the constitution of Great Britain has grown out of the exigencies of the people and the requirements of the imperial service."

Hon. Donald Ferguson followed in a condemnation of the government's action in respect of the sending of the contingents. He noticed Mr. Tarte's action at St. Vincent de Paul, when he declared that the government had provided against the first contingent being a precedent. He entirely agreed with Mr. Mills as to the gradual growth of the imperial constitution and its manner, but Mr. Tarte's action would not harmonize with that. Years ago, he said, it would be difficult to effect im-

When the young ladies of Mr. Alex. Boston's family left the family residence at 71 Wharncliffe road yesterday afternoon, they left in the house a sum of money and some jewelry. Mrs. Boston, going out later, considered it would be safer to carry the valuables on her person, so she put them in her pocket. The young ladies returned, and found the house had been broken into and their correspondence overhauled, and finding their valuables missing they at once notified the po-lice, While the detectives were at the house investigating, Mrs. Boston returned, and it was then discovered that nothing of value had been taken. The strange part of the affair is, that some of the letters which had been opened and read contained sums of money, which were left untouched. RUSKIN'S SIMPLE WORDS

Passages in Which Monosyllables Abound-Young Writers Should Study Him.

There are some things that young writers may find useful. John Ruskin was an Oxford graduate, an M. A., a D. C. L., an F. G. S., an F. Z. S., an F. H. THE "ROB ROY" MINES. masters of style that ever wrote English or any other language. Naturally, perial confederation in a tight place, but the first gun fired in a great war would do it. Senator Perley closed the longest words he could find in the dictionary, interspersed with Greek, afternoon's debate. Latin, French, German and Italian quotations. Well, look at this:

"The first of all English games is making money. That is an all-absorbing game, and we knock each other down oftener in playing at that than football, or any other roughest sport; and it is absolutely without purpose no one who enginges heartily in that game ever knows why. Ask a great money-maker what he wants to do with his money—he never knows. He doesn't make it to do anything with it. He gets it, only that he may get it. 'What will you make of what you've got?' you ask. 'Well, I'll get more,' he says. Just as, at cricket, you get more runs. There's no use in the runs, but to get more of them than other people is the game. And there's no use in the money, but to have more of it than other people is the game."

Look closely at the paragraph. There are 146 words in it, and 117 of them are of one syllable. Of the rest, 23 are of two syllables,5 of three and one of four. None is longer than thirt, and even that four-syllabled word is a very common. four-syllabled word is a very common one—"absolutely." There are 25 one-
