Virgie's inheritance.

CHAPTER II.

Lord Norton was at once informed of the romantic incidents connected with his niece's early life, and while he sympathized with the trials and sorrows to which she had been subjected, he also expressed his gratification that all had ended so well, and she would henceforth occupy so proud a position.

He appeared to have conceived a great affection for her during the little time she had been with him, and he was glad to hear that she had been his own daughter, while she devoted herself tirelessly to him, doing everything in her power to make his last days peaceful and comfortable.

He lived only three weeks after she went to Englewood, but that was long enough to see the desire of his heart accomplished: for Sir William worked diligently with his manuscript, completing it in a few days, and thus the aged veteran had the satisfaction of knowing that he would give to the world a valuable historical work to perpetuate his name when the world should know him no more.

The week following his death, and after the obsequies were over, Sir William wrote that letter to Lady Linton, announcing his contemplated marriage with Lord Norton's niece.

He purposely withheld nearly everything from her, save the bare fact that he was about to give Heathdale a mistress, and she was the relative and heiress of his lordship. He would have insisted upon having their reunion solemnized immediately if his cousin, Mr. Heath, had not been in the way, and he was so anxious to avoid the danger, while Virgie pleaded that it would hardly be proper, following so closely upon her uncle's death.

She went at once to Mrs. Heath, upon being released from her own duties in the sick-room, to express her sympathy for her in her trouble, and the two women instantly became the warmest friends.

Mrs. Heath at once recognized Virgie as the beautiful woman whom she had met several years previous at Niagara. She was deeply wounded upon learning how she had been deceived regarding her marriage, and how she had suffered when they met, believing her to be the wife of the man who had wooed and won her.

"I loved you," she said with starting tears, "though I wondered why you appeared so strangely at first. I wonder now how you were enabled to conduct yourself with so much self-possession."

Virgie and her playmate of olden time had renewed their acquaintance with evident pleasure, though the maiden could hardly realize that the stalwart, but rather bashful young man, to whom she was introduced as the "Willie" of long ago was the same with whom she had enjoyed such childish freedom and shared her toys in the corridor of that great house.

Rapport was invited to come to Englewood the week following the funeral of Lord Norton, when he was greatly astonished to learn of the strange sequel to the story of his guardian's early life and yet a dim suspicion of something of the kind had been floating in his mind ever since that evening when Mrs. Alexander had been so unnerved upon learning that Sir William was his guardian; for he had known that there had been some deep sorrow connected with his past, and having learned Mrs. Alexander's story, it seemed not unlikely that the two were in some way associated.

On the day that Virgie had encountered Lady Linton in Oxford street she had come to London, Sir William and Virgie accompanying her, to spend several days, having found it necessary to make a few purchases and some changes in her wardrobe before going to Heathdale; so it will be readily understood why the happy woman was at that time so unmoved by her ladyship's warm tones and threats. Her heart was too full of joy and gratitude to allow of her feeling any uneasiness or sorrow for her enemy, for she knew but too well that her avowed deeds would all recoil upon her own head.

It was fortunate for their plans, however, that her ladyship did not meet her brother, for he had accompanied his beloved to the store, where after fastening that one lovely half-blown lily on her mantle, he took leave of her for awhile; and went to attend to some business for himself; thus his presence in the city was not even suspected by Lady Linton. As soon as Virgie could be released by her dressmaker they all returned once more to Englewood.

By the 21st of the month Mr. William Heath was so far advanced toward recovery that his physician consented to allow him to be present at the ceremony, which was to occur in the church at Chester, and after-ward to accompany the bridal party home to Heathdale.

At ten in the morning Sir William led the woman of his deathless love once more to the altar. Virgie and Rupert stood beside them as they renewed the vows of their youth, while Mr. and Mrs. William Heath, with their family, the Duke of Palmouth, and his household, were also present to witness the ceremony.

The rector had been told something of the history of the couple upon whom he was to pronounce this sacred nuptial benediction, and his words to them were very solemn, very touching and impressive; and then the reunited husband and wife went out from his presence filled with a deep and holy joy such as they had never hoped to realize again in this world, while their future prospects seemed but the brighter for the chastening they had endured.

At noon the whole party left Englewood for Heathdale, followed by the congratulations and good wishes from the duke and his family, with whom Sir William and Lady Heath had formed a delightful friendship, and promised themselves much pleasure in the future interchange of visits.

Sir William and his wife experienced a slight feeling of dismay upon finding Heathdale all ablaze with light, and a brilliant reception in progress.

He had imagined that his sister, all unconscious of whom he was to bring home, might be there to meet him. He rather hoped she would, for he felt that Virgie deserved the triumph of coming to take her position there in her presence; but he was not quite prepared for a formal reception.

"I fear that Miriam has killed the fatted calf, and made a feast in view of our coming," he said as they drove up the avenue.

"But, Will, it will hardly be the thing for me to receive your friends in my traveling dress," Virgie remarked in a dubious tone.

"How long will it take for you to make a toilet?" he asked.

"Half an hour will be ample time."

"Very well, then, while the rest of the party are received at the main entrance, we will drive around to a side door, slip up to our rooms, and send word that we will be happy to greet our friends at half past eight. Rupert, will you engineer the matter for us?"

Rupert gladly undertook the commission, and we know with what success, as well as all that occurred later, when Sir William appeared before the astonished company with his wife, whom they had previously known as Mrs. Alexander.

Trusts and Combinations
Are unpopular. But there is one form of trust against which no one has anything to say. That is the trust which the public reposes in Hood's Sarsaparilla, and the best of it is the trust is fully justified by the merit of the medicine. For remember, HOOD'S Sarsaparilla CURES.

Hood's PILLS are purely vegetable, and do not purge, pain or gripe. Sold by all druggists.

New Yorker—I suppose you'll bleed all of us who go to the fair next summer? Chicagoan—Well, aren't you prepared to bleed for your country?

Is your tongue coated? Take Eesley's Liver Lozenges. They will work off that bilious condition.

By-the-way, did pretty Miss Nannie smile on your suit last night? Luckless—No; she didn't smile on it, old man; she laughed at it.

A Wonderful Cure.—Mr. David Smith, Coe Hill, Ont., writes: "For the benefit of others I wish to say a few words about Northrop & Lyman's VEGETABLE DISCOVERY. About a year ago I took a very severe cold, had a violent sore on my lips, was bad with dyspepsia, constipation and general debility. I tried almost every conceivable remedy, outwardly and inwardly, to cure the sore but all to no purpose. I had often thought of trying Northrop & Lyman's VEGETABLE DISCOVERY, so I got a bottle and when I had used about one half the bottle showed evident signs of healing. By the time that bottle was done it had about disappeared and my general health was improving fast. I was always of a very bilious habit and had used quinine and lemon juice with very little effect. But since using three bottles of the VEGETABLE DISCOVERY the biliousness is entirely gone and my general health is excellent. I am 60 years old. Parties using it should continue it for some time after they think they are cured. It is by far the best health restorer I know."

"This is a pretty soft soft I've got," remarked the dust in the carpet, "but I am afraid they are going to beat me out of it."

Among the pains and aches cured with marvelous rapidity with Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil, is ear ache. The young are especially subject to it, and the desirability of this Oil as a family remedy is enhanced by the fact that it is admirably adapted not only to the above ailment, but also to the cures, disorders of the bowels, and affections of the throat, in which the young are especially subject.

The elephant is one of the few immigrants to this country who does not try to smuggle something in his trunk.

The great lung healer is found in the excellent medicine sold as Bickie's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It soothes and diminishes the sensibility of the membrane of the throat and air passages and is a sovereign remedy for all coughs, colds, hoarseness, pain or soreness in the chest, bronchitis, etc. It has cured many when supposed to be far advanced in consumption.

The man who is persistently urged to "take a stand" in life generally meets his opportunity on a street car.

Why will you allow a cough to lacerate your throat or lungs and run the risk of filling a consumptive's grave, when by the timely use of Bickie's Anti-Consumptive syrup the pain can be allayed and the danger avoided? This Syrup is pleasant to the taste, and unsurpassed for relieving, healing and curing all affections of the throat and lungs, coughs, colds, bronchitis, etc.

When a woman goes to her mirror for an opinion she always gives it plenty of time for reflection.

How to Cure All Skin Diseases
Simply apply "SWAIN'S Ointment." No internal medicine required. Cures tetter, eczema, itch, all eruptions on the face, hands, nose, etc., leaving the skin clear, white and healthy. Its great healing and curative powers are possessed by no other remedy. Ask your druggist for SWAIN'S OINTMENT. Lyman, Sons & Co., Montreal, wholesale agents.

Rheumatism, Catarrh, Paralysis, Eczema, Four Stomach, Kidney Troubles, Indigestion, Debility, any form of Blood Poisoning, etc., are treated successfully. There are two preparations, internally to purify the blood through the stomach, externally to absorb the impurities through the pores of the skin; they are each 50c.
