Scientifically, of course, the popular idea of the jellyfish is wholly mistaken; but it is perhaps only in tropical waters that he is found in the perfection of intelligence. In the South Pacific, around the Islands of Polynesia, and as far south as the upper portion of the North Island of the First Methodist Church choir, and New Zealand, there is a jellyfish who not during that period of 42 years he has only knows where he wants to go, but is even provided with a sail which he can like the rest of this curious animal, is almost transparent, but unlike the body cupied the site on the corner of Park of the fish, which is of the usual gelatin- and Queen's avenues. ANNUAL BANQUET OF THE Y. M. C. A.

Brilliant Address By Rev. Dr. Roland B. Grant, of New York

DIRECTORS ELECTED

Large Attendance Last Evening in the Gymnasium of the Association's Building.

The annual meeting and banquet of the Young Men's Christian Association was held in the gymnasium last evening. About 200 men sat down to the dainty repast, and spent a very pleasant hour.

Mr. John Macpherson, the president of the association, was in charge of the meeting. The report of the nominating committee was brought in by Mr. Charles Glass, and was passed without question, making the following gentlemen directors of the association for the ensuing year, Messrs. J. F. Kern, W. D. I. Wright, J. F. White, James Stephenson, John M. Gunn, J.

The only speaker was Dr. Roland B. under the auspices of the association in the Grand Opera House on Sunday. Mr. Grant has an apparently limitless fund of stories, and he weaves them into the thread of his discourse with singular aptness, which makes his points very telling.

Speaking on the subject of education, Dr. Grant opened his remarks with a eulogy of the work of the Y.

Age of Specialization. "This is an age of specialization," ontinued the speaker, "and we are tending to drive this practice to an extreme. People say glibly that we may know so many things that we know nothing, and that it is better to specialize, like the philosopher who spent his whole life studying the Greek visited it, and of Athens as he saw that he had wasted his life, because perhaps not equal to his earlier ones, great a space, and that if he had his but all through his writings streaks life to live over again, he would spend This tendency in our educational systems of The Imperial Scots Concert Company. the present day is very dangerous, You All the Campbell and MacGregor may give a student four years' study oys will be at the Grand Opera of Greek, and at the end of that time House on Friday to greet the Imper- he may not know how to light a fire, al Scots Concert Company on their and that isn't education. Self-Support.

"Now the first element of self-respect is self-support, and it generally takes a severe shock to bring people to a recognition of the necessity of this particular quality. In this connection Dr. Grant made some very severe strictures against college life in general. He instanced a college banquet, where there were some 100 young men, accompanied by as many young ladies, and he said that every single new clubhouse on Oxford street, and one of those young men were "staggering drunk." press an opinion openly, considered on by the club had been eclipsed. Sensitiveness.

"Following on the element of selfsupport," continued the speaker, 'there is another element necessary in true education, that of sensitiveness. And my experience, as I have met with boys, is that they haven't got it. They are without feeling, and are given to cruelty. And that man Roosevelt is the worst teacher we have got, for he can't be happy unless he is killing something. The fact of the matter is that we are not able to put ourselves in the place of another, and feel things from their standpoint. In place of ensitiveness with the average boy there has grown up a spirit of rudeness. His whole life is spent in looking for trouble, and if he can't find it, why, he gets to work and helps to make it. What we need is to develop an element of sensitiveness and thoughtfulness for other people, and if we could develop this spirit in the minds of the rising generation we would have taken a great step towards their education. These are two qualities that the Y. M. C. A. stands for prominently, and it is gradually making its influence felt in that direction.

"You people have religious laws, and a respect for the Sabbath which we, even in New England, have forgotten, and you are obedient to these laws. obedience to the law is liberty. What we in the United States need is Grant, of New York, who also spoke just this better spirit which you possess, a higher sensitiveness, and it is only by the practice of this quality that we can reach the highest type of civilization.

Individual Ingenuity.

"The next grand element that I vould like to see developed more carefully is that of individual ingenuity. and this is one of the things that the association stands for strongly. There is lacking everywhere someone to take The Y. M. C. A. is a wonderful the initiative. And if we could put these qualibe a monument to myself, I would ties there perhaps we would learn to plant a Y. M. C. Sociability. "Then we need a spirit of sociability. We get too stiff. We don't keep in the spirit of fellowship with one another.
And this we would do well to avoid. We cannot properly help one another unless we understand, and are in sympathy with one another. "I am glad to find such a community as I have found here. One that is not spending all its time in booming itself. Numbers are not the only thing that counts, and I am glad that you haven't fallen under the spell of this counting spirit, as we have in United States. And so I would urge upon you to put the best heart you can into this Y. M. C. A. work. Make of it the best thing you can, and give it an esprit de corps that will be felt. EDUCATED HUSBANDS.

At an alumni meeting out east last week, a college president spoke, and here s something he said:

"The young men of today are money mad. They spurn education and culture and turn to business. They leave school too soon, and the women remain to be educated, and for what? If it continues I am afraid it will be to be the wives of gnoramuses.'

That will be a deplorable fate, indeed. A woman is naturally a proud person-proud of her appearance, her clothes, her home and her husband, if he is a fit person, and there is nothing that worries a woman so much as an unfit husband. She may love him, but she is always on the anxious seat for fear he may commit some grave error. One time a woman consolidate and erect a large building sitting at a happy table at a party heard her husband say, 'I seen him do that' twice,' and actually she didn't know Thomas A.
