The revolt of the citizens of Greater New York against the dictatorship of Richard Croker, the Tammany "Boss," is a striking victory for the cause of clean government, and an example calculated to raise many lesser Tammanys through the United States and possibly in Canada. There was only one great Tammany, but that was because in its strength it had thrown aside the cloak that a servant of the people wears and stood revealed as the fearful result of the growth of corruption in politics. The city was virtually under the control of the Tammany ring, who set a price on every office in the city's gift, and controlling the police department, winked at crime and protected criminals who "got away" themselves with a sufficient contribution to the fund that made Croker a multi-millionaire and enabled him and his colleagues to go long to buy an influence great enough to strangle every attempt at reform. But the sight of the wigman has at last become loathsome to the people who realize that Tammany rule has meant and must mean, and the better impulses of the brown stone and the tenement districts have been stirred to a sense of duty. A right minded one of the franchise has taught the machine that the people have the power to right any wrong that a corrupt human agency can inflict on the public. The greatest of new world cities has now elected as its chief magistrate a man of irreproachable morals, of splendid business ability, who may be depended upon to work faithfully and tirelessly to accomplish the reform which has pledged his best efforts to effect. Mayor Seth Low is described as a man so upright that he leans backward and there is no fear that he can be brought to stay the work he has undertaken. Associated with him as district attorney, is Judge Jerome, whose sensational and aggressive speeches were striking features of the campaign, and whose past efforts to expose and punish the rascals who have been gathering a profit from all manner of vice and crime have no doubt been so well known that he is more powerful than the influences against which he was previously unable to make a successful fight. Under the auspices of these men, Greater New York cannot but be reformed. The fact that a city with a nominal democratic majority of over 80,000 have elected as their representative a plurality of 30,000 is evidence of the independence thought with which the electors hung down the curtain on the misrule of the past. And as it was in New York, so it is everywhere—an independent people must right the wrongs that a political zeal has perpetrated.

It is something of a reflection on Canadian hospitality to have the various sums spent for the entertainment of the Royal party given a widespread publicity in the press of Canada. This counting and commenting on the cost of our efforts as hosts isn't calculated to put the heartiness of the welcome beyond question, and Royalty has an excuse for thinking that Canadians are after all rather a small souled people. The fact that St. John spent $3,000 and Halifax less than half that sum is no real indication that loyalty in St. John has struck its roots deeper than in Halifax. We presume the visitors would have carried away just as good an impression of the country had the decorations been less elaborate and incidents of hearty, homely welcome more common. All Royal Canadians were honored by the visit of the representatives of the over-seas sovereign, in the face of the happenings of the immediate past, cannot doubt the strength of our goodwill or allegiance, and it is seemingly that their attention should now be called to the expenses incurred in their reception. Such items of public expense may constitute legitimate news but unnecessary publication is, we submit, illadvised.

—According to the bulletin just issued by the Secretary for Agriculture, the field crops for the province, with the exception of hay, are under the average and not quite up to the season of 1900. The long continued dry weather in the summer months took strongly on grazing lands, consequently there was a decrease in all products of the dairy, and live stock is in not quite as good a condition as last year. While there is some falling off in the quantity of crops, values are much higher and farmers having potatoes and grain and dairy produce to sell get such good prices that they are in a great measure compensated.

—According to information which has been received by the department of fisheries, Messrs. the millionaire chocolate king of London, is beginning to reap a harvest from his investment of thousands of dollars upon the island of Anticosti. Recently his agents shipped to the French market over $40,000 worth of canned hake being the product of two months' fishing and canning operations on the island.

The officials of the United States legation at Constantinople have received news, through Salonika, that indicates the early release of the captives in the hands of the brigands. On Oct. 29, Miss Stone and Mme. Tsiska were both well.
