

buildings. You look over these and choose a certain number of desirable rooms and go with you prepared list to Hodge Hall Parlors where the choice is made. Your name is written on a card and with the names of the rest of the class, is put into a box. In another box are numbers from one up to the number of Juniors. Two Middlers preside, one at each box. One picks out a number, the other picks out a name, the one who gets number one having first choice and so on until the list is finished. Having made your choice, you settle in your quarters. You may decorate your room just as you desire and if you are in Alexander or Hodge Hall you will also have a bed room. As mentioned before, you provide yourself with a stove and bedclothes as well as a toilet set. Many of the students have couches almost covered with cushions. Their walls are decorated with pictures, college colors or flags and at their windows hang lace curtains. If they do not mind expenses they may light their rooms with gas or electric light instead of the ordinary coal oil lamp.

At seven o'clock in the morning you are aroused by the bell, and at seven-fifteen it rings again for prayers in the parlors of each dormitory. Lectures proceed throughout the day, and for exercise you may play tennis, for there are a number of courts, or you may take part in what they call "Irish Football" our ordinary association game. The roads are good for wheeling and the orchards are plentiful in the neighborhood. At the close of the last lecture in the afternoon, the students meet in a body in the Oratory of Stuart Hall where prayers are conducted by one of the Professors. Each Wednesday evening at six-forty, the several years meet in separate halls for prayer-meeting conducted by the students. Then on Sunday morning at eleven service is held in the Chapel and a sermon is preached by a member of the Faculty. At four in the afternoon, there is a conference, at which some subject is discussed by the professors. There are other meetings throughout the week and on Sunday, such as the Missionary Study Classes, the Bible Study Classes and the Missionary meeting.
