The last mentioned is a new and without doubt a most desirable combination in the above complaints and also in all malarial and congested conditions.

A CASE OF CHRONIC RHEUMATISM.

BY L. B. SMITH M.D., HORNELLSVILLE, N.Y.

Six years ago I had synovitis of the right knee joint following an injury from which I was confined to the house for several weeks, but finally recovered with slight stiffness. In January, 1897, the same knee began to enlarge, which gradually increased until it was at least half as large again as normal. Before this time arrived, the left knee, left ankle, left wrist, right elbow, and right jaw became affected, the latter becoming so bad until I could not place a teaspoonful of food between my teeth. I sat in a wheeled-chair for twelve weeks, during which time I lost flesh and appetite, while sleep was almost out of the question, excepting at short intervals. Before these conditions appeared my urine was loaded with uric acid, and despite all remedies and treatment, could not get rid of it. Being a physician myself, in practice since 1875, I tried everything known to me, and a great many remedies recommended by my brother physicians, but the conditions remained the same, gradually becoming worse. In October, 1898, I was forced to quit work, and went into the Steuben Sanitarium, where I commenced the use of baths, electricity and massage, as well as medicines, following the same for several weeks.
