THE REVIEW, with this number, enters on the second half of its seventeenth year.

THE REVIEW extends greetings to its many readers, wishing all a Happy Christmas and New Year.

WHAT could be more appropriate for a Christmas present than the handsome and convenient new edition de luxe of Webster's Collegiate Dictionary? It is a thing of beauty and can be constantly used, thus keeping the giver in lasting and grateful remembrance.

REMINDERS are sent out with this number. We hope they will receive early attention from our subscribers.

THE Sackville Post has issued a beautiful and appropriate Christmas supplement, containing chosen literary selections. The illustrations are especially choice, several of them being reproductions from noted pictures.

NEARLY all readers of the REVIEW remit their subscriptions promptly. This is fair and reasonable. That the REVIEW cannot be published without money is clear to everybody. And yet a few, a very few, think it can. They allow a bill to be sent to them time after time without attending to it. Or they leave a place without the courtesy of writing a note telling us of their change of address. This is unfair and unreasonable. A business notice is constantly kept on the editorial page with an invitation to "Always read." Is it not a lack of courtesy to allow a paper to be sent to an address when the person addressed is no longer there, with a certainty of loss to the publisher?

MR. AMOS O'BLENIS, principal of the Model School, Fredericton, has been appointed inspector of schools for Westmorland and Albert counties, New Brunswick, in place of the late George Smith. Mr. O'Blenis is a teacher of considerable experience, having had charge of several important schools in the County of Westmorland, and has been principal of the Model School for more than two years. He has risen from the ranks by native industry and application. He possesses teaching ability of a high order, and with his knowledge of the work of common schools, combined with his energy and executive ability he will undoubtedly prove an efficient inspector.

Mr. John E. Page, Principal of the Hartland, Carleton County schools, has been appointed principal of the Model School, Fredericton. Mr. Page is an experienced and successful teacher and is a graduate of the University of New Brunswick.
