

Food and Drugs Act

the wisest approach has been to ask the restaurant owner, to warn him and to trust him. However, this approach has not always had the desired effect, and there have been some tragic incidents, Madam Speaker.

In the modern and open world we live in, we can no longer expect Canadians with serious allergies to eat only and always the food they themselves have prepared. These people also live active lives, and I think they have a right to participate in all the various activities that make life enjoyable. We must also ensure that they do not run any undue risks when they decide to eat food they are convinced not do them any harm.

If my time has expired, Madam Speaker, I will accept your injunction and call it three o'clock.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Cossitt): The period provided for Private Members' Business has now expired. Accordingly, the item has been dropped from the order of precedence.

It being three o'clock, this House stands adjourned until Monday morning at eleven o'clock.

The House adjourned at 3 p.m.
