

worm in the dung; they are more prevalent in wet seasons and on damp pastures.

Turpentine in raw milk, a decoction of pumpkin seeds, are old and tried remedies; santonine, as much as will lie on a five-cent piece, or tannate of pelletierine three to five grains, are new remedies recommended. The best preventive treatment is to change the pastures and crop the old ones for a few years.

A long worm is sometimes found in the intestines of pigs, unless in considerable numbers they seldom cause much trouble, if suspected give turpentine in milk or oil, or oil of wormseed.
