

American Contemporary Novels

THE SUPREME SURRENDER

By A. MAURICE LOW

This is the eighth of the twelve One-a-Month American Novels to be published during 1901.

"We have here a powerful study in the mingled contrasts of Washington life. It is first and last a love story, and of the sort which does not relax its grip till the last line is reached. . . . Many characters flit on the scene, . . . and there is much clever talk."—The Outlook, New York.

"Able as Mr. Low has sketched in his social and political background, his book is first and foremost an absorbingly interesting love story."—Boston Budget.

"Original in plot and brilliant in dialogue. Certain phases of the shadowy side of political life are well shown."—Chicago Evening Post.

"There is presented a picture of Washington life which is real and in which the figures stand forth from the canvas bold and clear."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Comments from various reviewers:

"There is reflection and keen psychological insight."

"Has caught the Washington atmosphere."

"His epigrams are extremely neat."

"Full of thought and fine sentiment."
