

themselves entirely unto the service of their fellow-creatures for Christ's sake.

There are at present no less than one hundred and sixty members of the Church of the Brethren engaged in the service of the Heathen, either as Missionaries, or Catechists, or Assistants to the Missionaries.

As to the question, where have the Brethren their chief Missions at present? I will here briefly recite the places:

In Greenland or Davis's Streights, where the Mission was begun so early as in the year 1733, the Brethren have at present two considerable settlements formed out of the converted Heathen, viz. at New Herrnhuth and Lichtenfels, as may be seen in Crantz's History of Greenland, which was published in England in the year 1767. The number of the Greenlanders living with the Brethren at the end of the year 1769, amounted at New-Herrnhuth to 540, and at Lichtenfels to 290.

In the back part of our American Colonies, particularly behind the provinces of Pennsylvania, New York, &c. the Brethren have laboured among the Indians ever since the year 1740, and the word of their testimony has been blessed by the Lord.

They began to publish the Gospel in some villages of the Indians, which were called at that time Chekomekah, Wechquatnach and Scattikok, and the first converted
