A WORKINGHAN'S BISHOP

of London since 1901 by about $25. This is what was shown by a balance sheet which the bishop published some time ago to answer people who talked of the huge salaries of the bishops. How he keeps out of the bankruptcy court, is, it is said, known to a few of his wealthy London friends.

Foot and Door Trick.

The bishop first showed his powers charge of mission work among the noor in the east end of London The "foot-and-door-trick," as he called it, was one that he then learned to perform with considerable success. and, he once declared, "every clergyown business, but what is more imlearn to practice." It is an example of getting an inch in order to take an luncheon, almost every afternoon ell. When the clergyman calls, as Dr. Ingram once explained, "after some undersigned until 5 p.m., Thursday, i.e. ingram once explained, "after some in the light day of September, 1997, for the dredging of the River Thames below the you hear a voice from the washtub time a little girl opens the door, and or speak. After that I can perhaps at the back ask. 'Who is that Sally? Sally shouts back, 'Please mother, it's Religion,"-a phrase which the bishop mind to combat. With the door opened the clergyman gently insinuates his foot between it and the doorpost, so > is "ruination to the boots and sometimes hurts the toes." Most bishops preach temperance, but don't practice total abstinence. Dr. Ingram does both. He believes in teetotalism for itself and regards it as an indispensable qualification in anyone who wishes to advance the cause of temperance among the intemper-

Debates With Infidels.

Instead of treating infidels with sacerdotal scorn and contempt and heaping anathemas upon them, he has frequently engaged in open-air debates with them in the parks on Sundays. And if they did not always find his logic convincing, they learned to esteem and respect the man. Dr. Ingram worker harder than ever when in 1897 he was made Suffragan Bishop of Stepney, one of the most populous and poorest of the big London boroughs. At this time he never thought of using carriages or cabs, but did his rushing about on street cars and by means of the democratic "underground." In the latter case, moreover he patronized the third-class compartments, just as his humble parishioners did, instead of "going first" and more often than not carried his frugal luncheon with him and dispatched it between stations.

Writes in His Carriage. As Bishop of London he hustles harder now than ever before. He rises More, W. T. Delvin and E. Parker. at an hour when most servants are still abed, and seldom retires before by Mr. James H. McCormick, marchmidnight. The head of innumerable ed from the hall to the cemetery, acsocieties, and with the most populous companied by the London diocese in the world in his charge, the demands on his time are incessant. It is purely to save time that he now uses a motor car or a horse and car- quent address at the graves, after the riage to get around London instead of dedication of the monuments by Sov-M. Asked about his daily work and his method of dealing with it, Bishop Ing. ram replied: "The work is pretty endless. Let me tell you how I map out my time. Each day as it comes brings as a preacher and organizer when in its own burdens in the form of letters letters, letters. Some days I have as many as a hundred, but the daily average is, I suppose, from 70 to 80. When they have been answered we consider that the first business of the day is ruled off. for exercise?" "Well. I make time for it. I almost always manage to get one day in the week which I can spend on the golf links. In addition to that, when I am living at Fulham, I often play lawn tennis for an hour before dinner, or before starting for my evening's work: and when I am staving here at London House I either take a walk on the embankment, or else walk to my meetings or other engagements instead of driving. The maintenance of my health is largely due to my regularity in taking exercise." MONUMENTS UNVEILED

Says the New "Toothbrush Mustache"

Is Only Harmless One. Berlin, Sept. 15 .- If you wish to be healthy wear the new toothbrush mustache. It may be uncomfortable as the complement to a kiss, but it is ab-

This is the dictum of Professor Wallnitz, who has been active in the controversy raging fiercely among eminent bacteriologists. The "toothbrush" is the invention of clever Americans and is urged against the popular mustache a la kaiser. The latter necessitates a mustache binder, and Wallnitz, after submitting several binders to careful microscopic examination has discovered fragments of diseases hair and skin and an incredible num ber of horrible bacilli.

The short, bristling decoration of the upper lip is all, he declares, that will save a sweetheart or wife from infection.
