am afraid that on the evidence I have heard tonight I could not recommend any bail," stated Chief Coroner Dr. A. J. Johnson last night it the morgue in the second sitting to enquire into the death of Col. Willlam Campbell Macdonald, who was killed on Sunday evening at the Union Station. Coroner Johnson made this ment just before the inquest adfourned after W. D. Horkins, associate member for the defence, of the firm of Robinette, Godfrey & Phelan, had made a request that the coroner re-commend to the proper authorities that bail be granted Engineer Ross, Fire-man Farner and Signaiman Hickey. Counsel for the defence suggested in uncertain manner that they thought the coroner's statement was ned to be prejudical. Engineer John Ross was the chief ess of the evening and told of his train in from Sarnia eut off from the cars and proere he was signaled and switched over onto track seven by Signaiman Hickey. He backed down at about four miles an hour towards the west, was sitting on the south side of his cabin endeavoring to watch the track in front of him, which was obscured at times by drifting steam and smoke. He stated that he usually could see a person standing on the ick thirty feet away before the Staff Captain McPherson, side to Col. Macdenald, told of going to the station with his commanding officer. After leaving the train he started across the tracks towards the platform when suddenly a huge black object appeared above him, and the next thing he knew the engine passed him. He rushed along and saw a man lying stretched out, but as it was not the colonel, and others were preparing to take care of him, he continued his search, and found the colone; under the tender.
