THE WIFE

BY JANE PHELPS, AUTHOR OF "MARGARET GARRETT'S HUSBAND," AND OTHER NOTABLE STORIES.

Ruth Returns. Brian Meets Her at the Station. CHAPTER LXXIV.

Ruth was to be away until three more days. Brian had spent every evening, save the first one, with Mollie King—seven in all. He had been very contented, although sometimes when he reached home late he would feel just a bit conscience-stricken.

"She's having a good time staying at expensive hotels, why should I stick around in this stuffy flat alone?" That flat was anything but stuffy, he knew, also that both the Roberts and the Curtis would be delighted to see him, or to have him come in and play cards.

The idea of learning to do his own typing under Mollie's tutelage, appealed to him. So, for the next three evenings, he appeared at the little studio with several parcels under his arm.

"I'll bring in the grub and we'll cook it together," he had said when Mollie asked what he had. "We'll have more time than if we go out."

So in the intimacy of a kitchenette and a two-burner gas stove, Mollie cooked beefsteak or chops, and made coffee, while Brian fixed the salad and old Rachel wondered where "Marse" Brian don' eat his dinners when Missy Ruth was away.

Mollie was, as she had said, a good typist. She insisted that Brian learn the latest method, although with his usual indulgence he said that "any old way would do, so long as he could write his letters."

"Indeed it won't! what kind of a teacher would I be to let you have your own way like that?" So, their heads close together, they spent the evenings over the machine. That is, they worked until ten o'clock. Then Brian would instet upon stopping, and they would talk or go to some neighboring cafe for a bite of supper, and gossip with the villagers for an hour or two.

"I won't be away to-morrow night," Brian said on the night before Ruth was expected.

"I shall miss you," Mollie answered. "Knowing Ruth was coming, she said to leave me alone, anyway."

"I'll come the next night—for my lesson." "I understand," Mollie said to herself, after the door had closed.

"He can come for his lesson, then must get back or she'll find fault." Had she known that Ruth scarcely ever objected to anything Brian did, Mollie would have been surprised.

She supposed he lived in an atmosphere of almost constant nagging. And that was the reason he sought her companionship.

That night, as he prepared for bed, Brian said: "No one can find fault if I am with Mollie because it is necessary."

"I hope Rachel won't tell Ruth I was out every night. I guess it is better tell her myself. I'll tell her I am learning typewriting, and it was too far to come way up here when she was away. She has no business to leave me alone, anyway," ending by throwing the onus of his defection upon Ruth, as usual.

And she, in the cheerless hotel room, counting the hours, almost the minutes, when she would be with Brian. She had determined to ask Mr. Mandel not to require her to stay away so long again. This time it had been unavoidable. But she was so lonely for Brian, and so afraid he would be unhappy.

"I do hope Rachel has cooked nice things for him," she had said to herself every day she had been away. She had written daily a short account of her work, and how lonely she was without him. He had also written often, but his notes told her nothing. He had not mentioned Mollie King, neither had he told of her evenings were spent. Ruth consequently took it for granted that part of them at least had been spent at home.

Her work had gone very satisfactorily. It had been an expensive job, and she couldn't fail to be pleased at the result. She had wired Brian that she would reach New York at five-thirty. He had told Rachel they would be home to dinner, then had ordered some flowers.

"She likes them," he had muttered, knowing he was saving his own conscience rather than catering to her love for the flowers.

He had gone to meet her. The train was a little late, but Ruth, almost the first one off, had spotted him at once, and with a glad little cry had run to him.

"Oh, Brian," she had said, snuggling to his side, "how good it is to be home again. To be with you."

"It's time you came back," he said as he kissed her again, "I had almost forgotten I had a wife."

Ruth looked sharply at him. Could he be speaking the truth? But not he was gazing at her with pride. Could she have seen herself, she would not have wondered. She had taken especial pains with her toilet and looked very chic and young. Her eyes were bright with love-light. Her face full of animation. Any man would be proud of her.

"I shan't let you forget again. I'm going to ask the firm to keep me in New York after this, as much as possible. I can't bear to be away from you so long again."

(To be continued to-morrow.)

More Congratulatory Messages to Board of Trade

The following letter has been received by the Board of Trade from the Deputy Postmaster-General, Ottawa:

The letter carries here for some years past been allowed, during the months of July and August, a weekly half-holiday either on Saturday or on some other day during the week, and they are now asking that this weekly half-holiday be given during the present year, and I am directed, therefore, to ask that you will be so good as to submit the matter to the Board of Trade and advise the department as to whether, in the case of the Board, the public would suffer any serious inconvenience if the request of the carriers is complied with.

During the time this half-holiday is given there is, of course, no delivery by the carriers that afternoon, but anyone notifying the Postmaster can obtain his correspondence at the General Delivery wicket by calling at the Postoffice.

Buffalo—Directors Buffalo Chamber of Commerce, in session, acknowledge your splendidly patriotic and friendly message on the cessation of the hostilities, and assure you people of our sincere admiration and appreciation of Canada's wonderful response to France's call to arms, the valor of her sons, the bravery of her daughters.

Standing with our Allies for one year, we rejoice with you that the bonds of more than a century of concord between us are welded by this great trial into an unbreakable chain.

Accept our congratulations, and also our best wishes for a happy solution of all the problems of peace.

GEO. C. LEHMANN, Secretary.

London—London Board of Trade cordially reciprocates the sentiments expressed in your timely "Peace" telegram.

The example of service and self-sacrifice afforded by the soldiers of the Dominion should give us a broader conception of our duty to the community of more than a century of concord between us as a whole, and it is hoped will inspire all our efforts in the years to come.

Joseph J. Crowley, President Detroit Board of Commerce sends thanks for telegram and for the expressions contained therein. Their officers and directors concur in the ideas expressed therein.

H. B. WARNER, Secretary.

Vancouver—Vancouver Board of Trade joins with you in giving thanks for the magnificent victory which has crowned the undivided efforts of the Allies. Canada's part in the great struggle has been a glorious one, reflecting the loyalty of her people to the Mother Land.

This board urges upon all the Boards of Trade in Canada the need of more than a century of concord between us as a whole, and it is hoped will inspire all our efforts in the years to come.

Rev. Robert White led the noon-day service in the Y.M.C.A. yesterday, delivering a very interesting and inspiring address. To-day Rev. Mr. Thompson will be in charge and to-morrow Rev. G. A. Woodcock will address the gathering. The interest that is being shown in these meetings since their inauguration has been very good.

EFFECT OF MUSTARD GAS. Most Disagreeable Feature of the Gas is Its Persistence.

The recent announcement that the Allies now have an effective supply of mustard gas shells shows how vital the chemist's work is to modern warfare. The gas shell has been one of the biggest problems for the Allied chemists, especially for those connected with the chemical warfare service. That the problem has been well solved is attested by documents found on captured German shells during the great drive now in progress. These documents state: "This gas (mustard gas) seems to have, even in diluted form, more harmful effects than the gas contained up to the present time in shells used by the field artillery."

Mustard gas, now being used extensively by both the Central and Entente Powers, is a compound chemically known as dichloroethyl sulphide. In French language it is called "mustard" because of its strong pungent odor and, to the Germans, it is officially known as yellow cross gas, as the shells are all marked with yellow crosses and bands. The Allied chemists have known the composition of this gas for some time, but only recently have they been able to perfect a process for manufacturing it on a large scale. Fortunately for our armies, this method is far superior to methods known hitherto.

Although the effects from this gas are not often deadly, still it is a very effective agent on account of its slow and insidious method of poisoning. The odor of mustard indicates danger, but it is not in itself uncomfortable until it causes the nose and throat to become irritated. If properly protected there will be no further bad effects. In extreme cases the eyes and lids become inflamed and blistered and severe inflammation of the lungs results in bronchitis and even pneumonia. The after-effects of the poisoning lays one off for several weeks, but seldom result in death.

The most disagreeable thing about the gas is its persistence, which necessitates keeping on gas masks for hours at a time. It lingers in dug-outs for days, and has to be forced out by means of fires and fans. In this connection the captured German documents state: "Gas poisoning still occurred among those who took off their masks after wearing them for twelve hours."

Getting Back Three Million Dollars

THE PAPER CONTROLLER for Canada a few weeks ago added $12 a ton to the price of news print paper—the kind used in printing the Courier. This addition, following closely upon several previous increases authorized by the Paper Controller, has meant to Canadian newspaper publishers a total increased publishing cost, in the matter of paper alone, in the past eighteen months, of three million dollars.

This very considerable sum Canadian publishers must recover from their customers, their readers and advertisers.

In connection with the earlier increases the readers of many daily newspapers have been required to pay $1 or more per year for their newspapers, while the subscription price of very many weekly newspapers has been increased from 50 to 100 per cent. In many cases still further increases will be necessary.

But all the three million dollars increase in paper costs cannot be loaded on readers; some of this sum must come from the advertisers—this in the form of increased advertising rates. Advertising rates in Canada are, generally speaking, much lower per thousand in circulation than in the United States.

Speaking on this point the editor of Marketing, a Canadian advertisers' newspaper published in Toronto, says in his last issue: "In meeting the Canadian publishers' calls for higher rates, advertising buyers should not fail to recognize that for years they have benefited by the publisher's undervaluation of his space, and should be the more willing on that account to recognize the present necessities." To all of which The Courier agrees.

GONE! THE OLD STYLE PAIL

Yes, they're gone! Sad wrecks, aren't they?—fit only for the junk pile or the dismal places where the rubbish is shot.

Familiar objects, these, in the days when the coopered or metal pail was in common use. But those days are passing. With the growing use of such losses are reduced to a minimum. Wood-pulp, shaped by tremendous hydraulic pressure and baked with intense heat, produces the most durable and economical container for liquids and semi-solids. Eddy's wash-tubs, milk pails, butter tubs, etc., not only outlast the old-fashioned articles of metal or wood-ware, but actually cost less money. Your dealer has them.
