Picture Machine Exploded in Face of Operator

While taking flashlight pictures in the Simpson House last evening Mr. B. McIntosh, of Toronto, formerly of the Benson House, Lindsay, had his face and head badly burned by the machine exploding. Mr. McIntosh pulled the string, but the machine exploded, and he was not working. He tried it several times, but it would not work, and he was finding it would not see what he was doing.

Photographed from "Lindsay Warmer" of Jan. 13th last.

Mr. MacIntosh says: "At the hospital I was kept masked night and day for five days. At the end of that time the burns were still very bad and the doctors would not hear of my returning to work. I knew if I could only get some Zam-Buk for the burns I would be back at work in quick time, because I had previously used the balm and knew what it would do.

At last I left the hospital and went straight to a local store and bought some Zam-Buk. At the hotel I applied a Zam-Buk dressing and this cooled the burning pains and gave me quick relief. I kept on with the Zam-Buk treatment and returned to work. Within just one week after first commencing with the Zam-Buk treatment I might have defied anybody to detect where the burns had been, so splendidly did Zam-Buk heal the injury."

Mr. MacIntosh resides at 48 Humbert St., Toronto.

ON HIS GOOD BEHAVIOR

THE WESTERN BAD MAN DOESN'T GET HALF A CHANCE.

Thanks to the Riders of the Mounted Police Canada's Frontier of Civilization is Remarkable in the Annals of New Countries—Mob Violence is Practically Unknown.

"When I went into British Columbia, four years ago," said a mounted policeman, "I felt a little dubious about coming into such a new country. But I was surprised to find that life and property are so safe. When a man commits a crime the mounted police get after him, and they land him, and when he gets into court he gets stuck. They don't allow much monkey work in those Canadian courts. They do the business. Yes, sir, it is a country of law and order."

There is much truth in this statement—a fact quite remarkable when one considers the general conditions in this vast and rapidly developing country. The developing of a new, prosperous territory attracts the adventurous as well as the enterprising. Young, unmarried men go west in large numbers. The restraints of former home life and social customs are absent. Under such circumstances it is easy to form habits of drinking and gambling and to fall into other forms of moral looseness. Personal safety and property rights are more or less insecure. Society tends toward lawlessness. Such, however, is not the case in northwest Canada. Quite to the contrary, it is doubtful if there is any country where person and property are better protected. The mounted policeman was right when he said that this is a country of law and order.

From the standpoint of crimes of violence the facts are interesting. In 1908 the total number of such offences committed in the three provinces, including homicide (of which there were 17 cases), manslaughter, stabbings, cuttings and assaults of all kinds was 634. The trial of these cases resulted in the conviction and punishment of 463. The total population of the three provinces being 1,115,000, it will be seen that the total proportion of such crimes to population was exceedingly small, while the percentage of convictions was over 76.

In the matter of burglary, larceny, housebreaking, etc., there were 213 cases, in 1911 of which the accused were convicted and punished—making over 84 per cent. of convictions.

There were 2,492 cases of frauds, embezzlement, false pretenses, etc., which resulted in 1,917 convictions—over 77 per cent.

These statistics are not by any means the best evidence of the fact. One must travel through the country to appreciate it properly. One finds himself in an atmosphere of respect for law. The people feel safe. They assume that the law will be enforced. The amount of crime and disorder that comes under one's personal notice is so small as to be negligible, and one sees comparatively little of it in the newspapers—at least crime occupies a relatively significant part of their space.

The absence of mob violence and lynchings in this country is another feature. "There hasn't been a lynching in northwest Canada during the last 10 years," said the ex-policeman to the writer. This policeman had been stationed in northwest Canada for four years, and was thoroughly conversant with the history of the force for many years. "A number of years ago," he said, "a negro killed a white man at Calgary. I was stationed there at the time. A movement was started that looked a little ominous. I went to the leader and talked with him. I said: 'We have this man in charge, and he is going to be brought promptly to trial. If he is guilty he will be punished, but if any attempt is made to mob him I will turn 110 Winchester upon the crowd that tries it.' No such attempt was made. The negro was shortly afterward tried, convicted and executed. The fact that the mounted policeman, 'the enforcement of the criminal law up there is always reasonably swift and certain. The people have confidence that the authorities will punish crime. There is no reason why they should interfere, and they do not attempt to do so.'"

Enough has been said to show that this is a country of law and order. The question then arises, What makes it so? What is there about the social organization and the underlying forces of this young civilization that gives it this distinctive feature? It is evident that in the thought of the farmer it was largely due to the efficiency of two institutions, the Royal Northwest Mounted Police and the courts. "When a man commits a crime," said he, "these mounted police get after him, and they land him." Such is certainly the reputation of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police. It is an organization that is unique among world-famous constabularies. It is a body of men numbering 681; composed of 61 officers and 600 men, commissioned officers and constables, with 558 horses. They police a territory composed of the provinces of Alberta, Saskatchewan, and the extensive districts of Mackenzie and Keewatin, excluding, of course, the larger cities which have their own constabulary. The most distant detachment is on the Arctic coast, 2,500 miles from headquarters at Regina—a distance that requires two months to travel. The entire force is under the command of a commissioner, with headquarters at Regina. The whole territory is divided into eight districts, each of which is under the charge of a superintendent, with headquarters respectively at different important points in the two provinces. At each divisional point there are barracks, a jail, and complete equipment. There are many duties performed by the force, in addition to what may be termed regular police duties. They maintain the common jails, escort all prisoners to trial and those who are convicted to the penitentiary, attend up all criminal courts, serve all criminal processes, escort lunatics to the asylum, etc., etc. They also conduct important patrol expeditions through unsettled and unsurveyed regions, visit the settlers once a month in sparsely settled sections, make investigations and report upon the condition of the natives, the state of immigration, the nature of the soil, crops, etc., all in outlying regions that are beginning to be settled—all this in addition to their regular police duties.

AN OVATION TO HANNA.

Col. Hugh Clark Is Forever Having His Little Joke.

Hugh Clark is known as a very funny man. As editor of The Kincardine Review, the genial member of the Commons representing South Bruce is never at a loss for a dry and humorous reply to any kind of question. Hugh is the colonel of the 32nd Bruce, and as such is some entertainment. During a recent camp he was host to Hon. J. W. Hanna, Provincial Secretary for Ontario. There were big times around the colonel's quarters between the guests, and the newspaper men and the time sleeping out and telling stories.

One morning about two o'clock several privates on late leave, who had been down city celebrating, got past the guards and wandered about the streets of the white village singing "The Holy City" with a vengeance on the chorus, and before long the crowd was augmented by a couple dozen from the various regiments.

Mr. Hanna heard the noise and turned over on his cot. Next morning he asked Col. Clark what the rumormongers were saying.

"Oh," said Hugh, and he never cracked a smile, "I'll find out." He went out and gathered a coterie of newspaper men and officers back to his guest's tent for the fun. When all were comfortable Hugh started. "Did you know that Hanna was given a tremendous ovation by this camp last night?" he said, and all listened for the news.

"Yes," he continued, "it was an immense ovation for him. During the night there were throngs passing and repassing his tent, crying 'Who's Hanna? Who's Hanna? Who's Hanna to the King.'"—Toronto Star Weekly.

In a Latin Class.

A story is going the rounds which is said to have originated in Kingston. This seems to be very likely, as the anecdote concerns a professor at Queen's University. This man had been engaged as instructor in the department of classics. Not long ago he was teaching a junior class in Latin when a stray dog found its way into the room, the door having been left open.

When the dog entered the classroom, the professor was busily engaged writing on the blackboard. The animal ran in among the students, and one bright youth pulled his tail. The dog gave a little squeak of pain, which caused the professor to glance round, but he did not do more than pause in his writing. This gave the youths sufficient pluck to try again. A second canine yell disturbed the quiet of the class, but still the instructor said nothing. The students made a third attempt with equally happy results.

Then the professor turned round, and addressed the dog, not the class, in broad Scotch: "Rin awa, doggie, rin awa." This is no place for you. You'd better gang into the senior Latin class. You'll only find puppies here."

The dog was left severely alone until it chose to depart.—Saturday Night

"Hello Girl!" Now a Countess.

People of Fredericton, N.B., are recalling a well known romance of a few years ago, since the cable was received recently announcing the death of the Earl of Ashburnham, and the succession of the Hon. Thomas Ashburnham, a nephew, who resides in Fredericton, to the title and estate.

Hon. Mr. Ashburnham, as he was then, fell in love with the voice of a telephone operator in Fredericton. By inquiry, he discovered that the voice belonged to Miss Marie Anderson, whose personality he found evidently was as attractive as her voice, for he married her shortly afterwards.

The Earl of Ashburnham left the other day for England. The new earl plans to return soon after settling up the estate of his late uncle, the fifth Earl of Ashburnham, to close his affairs in New Brunswick, and return to England with Lady Ashburnham to take up his permanent residence on his estate.

Elevating Music.

Pedestrians on St. Catherine street, Montreal's principal retail thoroughfare, were somewhat surprised recently to see the front of one of the leading piano houses decorated with a flaring poster, which from a distance appeared to be only the words:

BUTT
BUTT

Closer inspection only increased their surprise at the method employed to distinguish a distinctive advertisement for the intervening lines, printed in smaller type, made the sign read as follows:

DON'T miss hearing the world's greatest contralto, Mme. Clara BUTT in the Princess Theatre, Jan. 27.

PROFIT BY OTHERS' EXPERIENCE

Gray Hair Restored
My hair was getting quite gray and falling out rapidly and I was troubled with a terrible itching of the scalp. My head was full of dandruff, which fell upon my clothes and kept me continually brushing it off. While on a visit to Rochester I heard of your Sage and Sulphur for the hair. I got a bottle and used it. A few applications relieved the itching, my hair stopped falling out and gradually came back to its natural color. It is now a nice dark brown color, soft, glossy and pliable. Several of my friends want to use it, and I want to know what you will charge me for six bottles of it.
MISS E. A. ROSS, Sharon, Mercer Co., Pa.

Grew Hair on a Bald Head
For two or three years my hair had been falling out and getting quite thin until the top of my head was entirely bald. About four months ago I commenced using Sage and Sulphur. The first bottle seemed to do some good, and I kept using it regularly until now I have used four bottles. The whole top of my head is fairly covered and keeps on coming in thicker. I shall keep on using it a while longer, as I notice a constant improvement.
