EVENING DRESS FOR GENTLEMEN

To be correctly attired, a gentleman should appear in conventional evening clothes at all formal functions which occur after 6 o'clock. This has long been one of the unwritten laws of society in the east, and is fast becoming one here. For the benefit of men, we publish in this space a Formal Dress Chart, which we have arranged from a similar one issued by The Haberdasher—a publication that is an authority on men's dress. It states the correct apparel for formal dress—both day and evening—all of which we have. Fashion cannot find fault with the selections for this store stands ever abreast with the correct styles.

HENRY DAGNEAU'S WORK COMMENDED.

A Citizen Tells of the Good He Has Done in Stopping Cruelty to Animals.

To The Planet.—Will you please give me a little of your valuable space for a few remarks in reference to the good and noble work carried on in the Maple City by Mr. Dagneau, who formerly was in the hardware business. We have for some time past taken a deep interest in the welfare of animals. The cruelty shown to some horses here would make a person's heart ache. Some men thought nothing of driving their horses in town a distance of 12 or 14 miles and leaving them standing on the market for hours without food or drink and would drive them back again and still not feed them. Another case was that of a man who dug a spade into his horse to cause gashes in the poor beast's body an inch and a half deep. Others again driving horses a great distance when their feet are so sore they can hardly step on them. Since Mr. Dagneau has started in this good work I don't see so much cruelty. Horses are fed, warmed and taken care of much better than they used to be on our own city market as well as other places, and I understand Mr. Dagneau doesn't get any salary whatever for his kind work and he deserves one. I hope the world will continue here as I for one feel very grateful to him for his work in the past, and I will be willing to help him all I can. Yours truly, A CITIZEN.

A CALL FOR 40,000 MORE MEN FOR SOUTH AFRICA.

It Will Take That Number to Prevent a Dutch Rising in Cape Colony it is Said.

London, January 7.—This morning's news from Cape Town is again unsatisfactory. Martial law has been proclaimed at Malmesbury, and would have been proclaimed in other districts but that the cabinet called Saturday was unable to agree as to its advisability. The vagueness of the information concerning the movements and position of the invaders has sent a fresh cold fit over the colonists; and Cape Town calls loudly for strong reinforcements from England on the ground that the greater part of Lord Kitchener's available force is employed in protecting the lines of communication and the Rand mines, the latter extending for a distance of fifty miles.

It is asserted by one Cape Town correspondent that, unless the forces in Cape Colony are increased, a most undesirable state of affairs may result, as the success in arms of the invaders, however slight, might be the signal for a Dutch rising.

As it is, many British residents have had to leave the Dutch villages near Cape Town, their lives being unbearable.

The Cape Town correspondent of the Daily Mail, who calls for 40,000 fresh troops, says: "Prominent Afrikaner loyalists declare that the rebellious colonists will constitute the colonial call to arms as a challenge, and that the ominous silence of the pro-rebels, combined with the fact that members of the pro-Boer junta in Cape Town have been touring in the disaffected districts, emphasizes the necessity for martial law. The necessity was never more acute for despatching reinforcements. Already there is proof that colonials are leading one commando."

The military movements reported are quite unimportant, though Portugal is sending reinforcements to Lorenzo Marques. Dr. Leyds, according to the Hague correspondent of the Daily Mail, is recruiting in Holland, Belgium, France and Germany; and his recruits will be sent to Namaqualand, ostensibly as emigrants, each man receiving £50 down on starting.

In a letter to the Times this morning the Earl of Dunraven, emphasizing the "very grave situation in South Africa," warns the country to distrust the opinions of experts on the spot and to be ready for the unexpected. He complains of the "inertia of the authorities" and urges the necessity of large reinforcements.

The Cape Town correspondent of the Times, who confirms the reports of the multiplicity of the Boer commandos, says: "Nearly five-sixths of the British forces are employed to guard the lines of communications and to garrison towns, leaving a very small number, partly unmounted, to pursue the enemy. Large reinforcements are advisable, and these would be cheaper in the end."

"The damage which the Boers did to the Kleinfontein mine is officially estimated at £210,000."

HOW A MILLIONAIRE LEAVES THIS WORLD.

Death of Philip D. Armour the Great Chicago Packer—His Fortune Estimated at From Ten to Twenty-five Millions.

Chicago, Jan. 7.—Philip D. Armour died at his residence in Prairie avenue, in this city, at 5:45 o'clock last evening. The end came after two years of illness, during which time Mr. Armour visited German baths, passed the cold months in Southern California and devoted himself largely to an attempt to restore his health, which, however, had been broken, never to be regained.

The millionaire retained consciousness until an hour within his death. During the day he had realized that death was near. To those around him he had said: "I know I am very sick and am ready for death when it comes. Soon after luncheon and just before the physician forbade him taking more, Mr. Armour in feeble tones said that he would like to hear the Lord's Prayer read. One of the trained nurses, who had been attending him, drew a chair to the bedside and slowly read from the Bible the prayer for which the dying man had asked. It was read sentence by sentence, and each was repeated by Mr. Armour. When the "Amen" had been repeated by him he sank back on the pillow and closed his eyes restfully. It was the last word the great financier spoke, except feeble farewells to his family. It is believed all the Armour properties will be held intact until the grandchildren come into their own. Estimates of Mr. Armour's own estate run from ten million dollars to twenty-five million dollars. This, of course, does not include the $15,000,000 or $20,000,000 owned by the younger members of his family. For years every enterprise he was interested in had been making immense profits. His holdings of stock have all advanced largely during the last three years.

Philip D. Armour, who was in his 60th year, made his own life on lines unique and wholly original with himself. From a not over rich Oneida county, N. Y., farm to the position of paying more freight and controlling more provisions than any other man in the world were two extremes of his life. Philip Armour was born in Stockbridge, Oneida county, N. Y., May 6, 1832. The California gold fever struck Western New York in 1849 and young Armour, with three or four companions, started for the Pacific coast. The almost incredible part of it was that the party walked nearly the entire distance from New York to California. The commercial sense which always predominated in his life indicated its presence as soon as he saw the gold fields of California. He had made money from the start, and at the end of six years returned home with a fortune. Becoming dissatisfied with the quiet life of his native town, he came west again, and together with a brother-in-law, established a large wholesale grocery house in Milwaukee. This venture was also successful, and in a year's time he purchased the largest grain elevator in Milwaukee. This led to more elevators and railroad stock. In 1866 he came to Chicago to take charge of the Chicago branch of a New York packing establishment. The result was that the Chicago house ceased to be a branch, and the west gained the largest packing and provision plant in the world. The property interests for which Mr. Armour stood are estimated at $150,000,000. His personal share of this property is variously estimated at from $25,000,000 to $80,000,000. In works of charity Mr. Armour's monument will be found in the Armour Institute. The institute today represents an investment on the part of Mr. Armour and his brother Joseph of $2,500,000, and a yearly expense for maintenance of $100,000.
