Rev. R. F. Dixon Lecture at Windsor.

at Windsor.

A most interesting lecture was given before Quiuctillan Society on Monday evening, Feb. 20th, by Rev. R. P. Dixon, rector of Horton, on Some English Poets. The President of the Society, S. Jeffery, Eaq., B. A. presided, and a-large audience filled Commons' Hall.

In introducing the speaker, Mr. Jeffery said that it was the hope of the Society to have a course of public lectures during the winter, and that Mr. Dixon's well known hiterary stainments had marked him out in so prominent a manner, that in securing him to deliver the first lecture Quiutillan was outlining to the general public the standard of excellence that was to mark the Course. He touched on the fact that Mr. Dixon had recently lectured before Acadia University.

cently lectured before Acadia University.

Mr. Dixon's treatment of his subject was masterly, showing breadth of thought, originality of idea, and closeness of study. He was listened to with rapt attention as he delivered his learned and highly entertaining lecture. He began by saying that Higgiand was remarkably rich bed in sailors and poets, that without doubt the one fact was in a certain degree responsible for the That considering the generally supposed characteristics of the English people as a race, the fact that they had produced at all times and in all ages so many, great poets was peculiar. This fact could no doubt be taken as indicative of the moral subject of the moral subject of the subject of the moral subject of the s Regiand was remarkably rich book in sailors and poets, that without doubt the one fact was in a certain degree responsible for the That considering the generally supposed characteristics of the English people as a race, the fact that they had produced at all times and in all ages so many, great poets was peculiar. This fact could no doubt be taken as indicative of the moral purity of the nation. Coming to the main portion of his address, Mr. Dix on said that English poetry was characterized by five distinct marks—1st, Pure Morality; 2nd, Love of Nature; 3rd, Saneness; 4th, Straightforwardness; 5th, Diversity.

A poet in the true sense was botts an artist and a teacher. Art occupies a high place in the poet's equipment, but a poet is first and foremost a prophet, and second a teacher. In short a poet is a man with the hand of an artist and the soul of a prophet, Milton, the greatest of modern English poets, was winderful for the sustained grandeur of his lines; Wordsworth, the poet of nature, was less of an artist than either Milton or Lord Tennyson.
