

The Union Advocate.

Board of Work

A WEEKLY JOURNAL

W. C. ANSLOW

Our Country with its United Interests.

EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR

Vol. XXIV.—No. 46

Newcastle, Wednesday, August 26, 1891.

WHOLE No. 1242

SPECIAL PRICES FOR

I have a few old Balmston suits which I will sell at a very cheap price. As follows:

1 do. do. Meris	32.00
1 do. do. Walnut	32.00
1 do. do. Oak	32.00
1 do. do. Marble Top	35.00

These Suits contain Belstead, Duroy, C. & Co. T. & Co. 1 Rooker and a large Bawl Mirror, and I have only one of each I want to clear them out for new ones. They are very cheap and I have only one of each I want to clear them out for new ones. They are very cheap and I have only one of each I want to clear them out for new ones.

Sold for PROMPT CASH by
B. FAIREY, PUBLIC AUCTIONEER,
NEWCASTLE.

Newcastle, August 8, 1891.

L. J. TWEED,
ATTORNEY & BARRISTER
AT LAW.
NOTARY PUBLIC
CONVEYANCER, &c.

OFFICE—Old Bank Montreal
J. D. PHINNEY,
Barrister & Attorney at Law
NOTARY PUBLIC, &c.

RICHMOND, N. B.
OFFICE—COURT HOUSE SQUARE,
May 4, 1888.

O. J. MacCULLY, M. A. M. D.,
Memb. COL. MED. LONDON,
M.D. 1872.

DISEASES OF EYE EAR & THROAT.
Office: Cor. Water and Main Streets,
Newcastle, Nov. 12, 1888.

Charles J. Thomson,
Agent MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE Company of New York. Law LARROSE INSURANCE Company in the North's Agent for the Commercial and Collecting Agency.

Barrister, Procurer for Estates,
Notary Public, &c.
Claims Promptly Collected, and Profits Shared with the Policyholder according to accuracy and despatch.

Engine House, Newcastle, Alameda, N. B.

Dr. R. Nicholson,
Office and Residence,
McCALLUM ST., NEWCASTLE.
Jan. 22, 1888.

Dr. W. A. Ferguson,
RESIDENCE and OFFICE in house owned by Mr. R. H. O'Connell, at foot of Street's Hill
Newcastle, Jan. 2, 1891.

Dr. H. A. FISH,
Newcastle, N. B.
July 23, 1890.

W. A. Wilson, M. D.,
Physician and Surgeon,
DERBY, N. B.
Derby, Nov. 15, 1890.

J. R. LAWLOR,
Auctioneer and Commission Merchant,
Newcastle, New Brunswick
Prompt returns made on consignments of merchandise. Auctions attended to in town and country.

Newcastle, Oct. 1, 1890.

CEO. STABLES,
Auctioneer & Commission Merchant,
NEWCASTLE, N. B.
Goods of all kinds handled on Commission and prompt sales made. Will attend to Auctions in Town and Country in a satisfactory manner.
Newcastle, Aug. 11, 88.

KEARY HOUSE
(FORMERLY WILBUR'S HOTEL)
THOS. F. KEARY, Proprietor.

This Hotel has been entirely renovated and re-furnished throughout. Strongly connected with the Hotel. Yachting Facilities. Some of the best food and catering made within eight miles. For salt water bathing. Good Sample Rooms for Commercial men.

TERMS, $1.50 per day, with Single Rooms $1.75

$3000

THIS HOTEL has been entirely renovated and re-furnished throughout. Strongly connected with the Hotel. Yachting Facilities. Some of the best food and catering made within eight miles. For salt water bathing. Good Sample Rooms for Commercial men.

TERMS, $1.50 per day, with Single Rooms $1.75

Local Literature.

CHERRY-TREE DOOR.

It happened one week in the month of Jerry but at the end of that time his wife appeared and put down five shillings on the counter.

"Will you please take that off the account, sir," she said, and gave me a receipt.

"This was done with a great deal of reluctance," said Jerry, "but I had no choice. The wife of the other was making an effort to clear her husband's debt."

At the end of another week a second five shillings was paid, and then harvest came on. All the little tradesmen in the village were busy, and even Jerry was not left behind.

On the third week Jerry's wife brought ten shillings, and on the fourth fifteen, and so it went until the end of the month. Jerry's wife was very kind and generous, and he was very grateful to her.

Nothing was brought for a fortnight, and the landlady consulted herself upon not having heard of Jerry's wife for so long a time.

"I have been busy with Jerry," said Mr. Rewitt, "but another week's month had passed without Jerry appearing."

"Perhaps he is not well," said the landlady, "but I have heard him and the Green-Grocer has caught his customer."

"Good feeling," suggested his wife. "I don't know, but I give you my word that I see they want a pot of tea on the table, and it will be an excuse for me to stop in upon him."

"That's not much of a job for him, seeing you give George Stevens the best of the work," said Mr. Rewitt.

"Steven's works better than Jerry's," replied his wife, "you can always trust him to do your work when it is heavy, but Jerry keeps the things for good-looking."

"That's true, but I've got a bit of a headache that will not go away, and I am afraid to wait a week or two. Take them."

"I'll take both," said Richard Rewitt, "nothing like having your look well while you are about it."

Arnold for the youngest of Jerry, the landlady's park in the morning—there being a sick time when he could be easily spared from home. Outside were a couple of loafers with no money, and no credit, who touched their hats to him.

Mr. Rewitt favored them with a nod of lofty indifference.

Jerry's cottage was in the middle of the road and although its inside was a sick time when he could be easily spared from home. Outside were a couple of loafers with no money, and no credit, who touched their hats to him.

Mr. Rewitt favored them with a nod of lofty indifference.

Jerry's cottage was in the middle of the road and although its inside was a sick time when he could be easily spared from home. Outside were a couple of loafers with no money, and no credit, who touched their hats to him.

Mr. Rewitt favored them with a nod of lofty indifference.

Jerry's cottage was in the middle of the road and although its inside was a sick time when he could be easily spared from home. Outside were a couple of loafers with no money, and no credit, who touched their hats to him.

Mr. Rewitt favored them with a nod of lofty indifference.

Jerry's cottage was in the middle of the road and although its inside was a sick time when he could be easily spared from home. Outside were a couple of loafers with no money, and no credit, who touched their hats to him.

Mr. Rewitt favored them with a nod of lofty indifference.

Jerry's cottage was in the middle of the road and although its inside was a sick time when he could be easily spared from home. Outside were a couple of loafers with no money, and no credit, who touched their hats to him.

Mr. Rewitt favored them with a nod of lofty indifference.

Jerry's cottage was in the middle of the road and although its inside was a sick time when he could be easily spared from home. Outside were a couple of loafers with no money, and no credit, who touched their hats to him.

Mr. Rewitt favored them with a nod of lofty indifference.

Jerry's cottage was in the middle of the road and although its inside was a sick time when he could be easily spared from home. Outside were a couple of loafers with no money, and no credit, who touched their hats to him.

Mr. Rewitt favored them with a nod of lofty indifference.

Local Literature.

CHERRY-TREE DOOR.

It happened one week in the month of Jerry but at the end of that time his wife appeared and put down five shillings on the counter.

"Will you please take that off the account, sir," she said, and gave me a receipt.

"This was done with a great deal of reluctance," said Jerry, "but I had no choice. The wife of the other was making an effort to clear her husband's debt."

At the end of another week a second five shillings was paid, and then harvest came on. All the little tradesmen in the village were busy, and even Jerry was not left behind.

On the third week Jerry's wife brought ten shillings, and on the fourth fifteen, and so it went until the end of the month. Jerry's wife was very kind and generous, and he was very grateful to her.

Nothing was brought for a fortnight, and the landlady consulted herself upon not having heard of Jerry's wife for so long a time.

"I have been busy with Jerry," said Mr. Rewitt, "but another week's month had passed without Jerry appearing."

"Perhaps he is not well," said the landlady, "but I have heard him and the Green-Grocer has caught his customer."

"Good feeling," suggested his wife. "I don't know, but I give you my word that I see they want a pot of tea on the table, and it will be an excuse for me to stop in upon him."

"That's not much of a job for him, seeing you give George Stevens the best of the work," said Mr. Rewitt.

"Steven's works better than Jerry's," replied his wife, "you can always trust him to do your work when it is heavy, but Jerry keeps the things for good-looking."

"That's true, but I've got a bit of a headache that will not go away, and I am afraid to wait a week or two. Take them."

"I'll take both," said Richard Rewitt, "nothing like having your look well while you are about it."

Arnold for the youngest of Jerry, the landlady's park in the morning—there being a sick time when he could be easily spared from home. Outside were a couple of loafers with no money, and no credit, who touched their hats to him.

Mr. Rewitt favored them with a nod of lofty indifference.

Jerry's cottage was in the middle of the road and although its inside was a sick time when he could be easily spared from home. Outside were a couple of loafers with no money, and no credit, who touched their hats to him.

Mr. Rewitt favored them with a nod of lofty indifference.

Jerry's cottage was in the middle of the road and although its inside was a sick time when he could be easily spared from home. Outside were a couple of loafers with no money, and no credit, who touched their hats to him.

Mr. Rewitt favored them with a nod of lofty indifference.

Jerry's cottage was in the middle of the road and although its inside was a sick time when he could be easily spared from home. Outside were a couple of loafers with no money, and no credit, who touched their hats to him.

Mr. Rewitt favored them with a nod of lofty indifference.

Jerry's cottage was in the middle of the road and although its inside was a sick time when he could be easily spared from home. Outside were a couple of loafers with no money, and no credit, who touched their hats to him.

Mr. Rewitt favored them with a nod of lofty indifference.

Jerry's cottage was in the middle of the road and although its inside was a sick time when he could be easily spared from home. Outside were a couple of loafers with no money, and no credit, who touched their hats to him.

Mr. Rewitt favored them with a nod of lofty indifference.

Jerry's cottage was in the middle of the road and although its inside was a sick time when he could be easily spared from home. Outside were a couple of loafers with no money, and no credit, who touched their hats to him.

Mr. Rewitt favored them with a nod of lofty indifference.

Jerry's cottage was in the middle of the road and although its inside was a sick time when he could be easily spared from home. Outside were a couple of loafers with no money, and no credit, who touched their hats to him.

Mr. Rewitt favored them with a nod of lofty indifference.

Local Literature.

CHERRY-TREE DOOR.

It happened one week in the month of Jerry but at the end of that time his wife appeared and put down five shillings on the counter.

"Will you please take that off the account, sir," she said, and gave me a receipt.

"This was done with a great deal of reluctance," said Jerry, "but I had no choice. The wife of the other was making an effort to clear her husband's debt."

At the end of another week a second five shillings was paid, and then harvest came on. All the little tradesmen in the village were busy, and even Jerry was not left behind.

On the third week Jerry's wife brought ten shillings, and on the fourth fifteen, and so it went until the end of the month. Jerry's wife was very kind and generous, and he was very grateful to her.

Nothing was brought for a fortnight, and the landlady consulted herself upon not having heard of Jerry's wife for so long a time.

"I have been busy with Jerry," said Mr. Rewitt, "but another week's month had passed without Jerry appearing."

"Perhaps he is not well," said the landlady, "but I have heard him and the Green-Grocer has caught his customer."

"Good feeling," suggested his wife. "I don't know, but I give you my word that I see they want a pot of tea on the table, and it will be an excuse for me to stop in upon him."

"That's not much of a job for him, seeing you give George Stevens the best of the work," said Mr. Rewitt.

"Steven's works better than Jerry's," replied his wife, "you can always trust him to do your work when it is heavy, but Jerry keeps the things for good-looking."

"That's true, but I've got a bit of a headache that will not go away, and I am afraid to wait a week or two. Take them."

"I'll take both," said Richard Rewitt, "nothing like having your look well while you are about it."

Arnold for the youngest of Jerry, the landlady's park in the morning—there being a sick time when he could be easily spared from home. Outside were a couple of loafers with no money, and no credit, who touched their hats to him.

Mr. Rewitt favored them with a nod of lofty indifference.

Jerry's cottage was in the middle of the road and although its inside was a sick time when he could be easily spared from home. Outside were a couple of loafers with no money, and no credit, who touched their hats to him.

Mr. Rewitt favored them with a nod of lofty indifference.

Jerry's cottage was in the middle of the road and although its inside was a sick time when he could be easily spared from home. Outside were a couple of loafers with no money, and no credit, who touched their hats to him.

Mr. Rewitt favored them with a nod of lofty indifference.

Jerry's cottage was in the middle of the road and although its inside was a sick time when he could be easily spared from home. Outside were a couple of loafers with no money, and no credit, who touched their hats to him.

Mr. Rewitt favored them with a nod of lofty indifference.

Jerry's cottage was in the middle of the road and although its inside was a sick time when he could be easily spared from home. Outside were a couple of loafers with no money, and no credit, who touched their hats to him.

Mr. Rewitt favored them with a nod of lofty indifference.

Jerry's cottage was in the middle of the road and although its inside was a sick time when he could be easily spared from home. Outside were a couple of loafers with no money, and no credit, who touched their hats to him.

Mr. Rewitt favored them with a nod of lofty indifference.

Jerry's cottage was in the middle of the road and although its inside was a sick time when he could be easily spared from home. Outside were a couple of loafers with no money, and no credit, who touched their hats to him.

Mr. Rewitt favored them with a nod of lofty indifference.

Jerry's cottage was in the middle of the road and although its inside was a sick time when he could be easily spared from home. Outside were a couple of loafers with no money, and no credit, who touched their hats to him.

Mr. Rewitt favored them with a nod of lofty indifference.

Local Literature.

CHERRY-TREE DOOR.

It happened one week in the month of Jerry but at the end of that time his wife appeared and put down five shillings on the counter.

"Will you please take that off the account, sir," she said, and gave me a receipt.

"This was done with a great deal of reluctance," said Jerry, "but I had no choice. The wife of the other was making an effort to clear her husband's debt."

At the end of another week a second five shillings was paid, and then harvest came on. All the little tradesmen in the village were busy, and even Jerry was not left behind.

On the third week Jerry's wife brought ten shillings, and on the fourth fifteen, and so it went until the end of the month. Jerry's wife was very kind and generous, and he was very grateful to her.

Nothing was brought for a fortnight, and the landlady consulted herself upon not having heard of Jerry's wife for so long a time.

"I have been busy with Jerry," said Mr. Rewitt, "but another week's month had passed without Jerry appearing."

"Perhaps he is not well," said the landlady, "but I have heard him and the Green-Grocer has caught his customer."

"Good feeling," suggested his wife. "I don't know, but I give you my word that I see they want a pot of tea on the table, and it will be an excuse for me to stop in upon him."

"That's not much of a job for him, seeing you give George Stevens the best of the work," said Mr. Rewitt.

"Steven's works better than Jerry's," replied his wife, "you can always trust him to do your work when it is heavy, but Jerry keeps the things for good-looking."

"That's true, but I've got a bit of a headache that will not go away, and I am afraid to wait a week or two. Take them."

"I'll take both," said Richard Rewitt, "nothing like having your look well while you are about it."

Arnold for the youngest of Jerry, the landlady's park in the morning—there being a sick time when he could be easily spared from home. Outside were a couple of loafers with no money, and no credit, who touched their hats to him.

Mr. Rewitt favored them with a nod of lofty indifference.

Jerry's cottage was in the middle of the road and although its inside was a sick time when he could be easily spared from home. Outside were a couple of loafers with no money, and no credit, who touched their hats to him.

Mr. Rewitt favored them with a nod of lofty indifference.

Jerry's cottage was in the middle of the road and although its inside was a sick time when he could be easily spared from home. Outside were a couple of loafers with no money, and no credit, who touched their hats to him.

Mr. Rewitt favored them with a nod of lofty indifference.

Jerry's cottage was in the middle of the road and although its inside was a sick time when he could be easily spared from home. Outside were a couple of loafers with no money, and no credit, who touched their hats to him.

Mr. Rewitt favored them with a nod of lofty indifference.

Jerry's cottage was in the middle of the road and although its inside was a sick time when he could be easily spared from home. Outside were a couple of loafers with no money, and no credit, who touched their hats to him.

Mr. Rewitt favored them with a nod of lofty indifference.

Jerry's cottage was in the middle of the road and although its inside was a sick time when he could be easily spared from home. Outside were a couple of loafers with no money, and no credit, who touched their hats to him.

Mr. Rewitt favored them with a nod of lofty indifference.

Jerry's cottage was in the middle of the road and although its inside was a sick time when he could be easily spared from home. Outside were a couple of loafers with no money, and no credit, who touched their hats to him.

Mr. Rewitt favored them with a nod of lofty indifference.

Jerry's cottage was in the middle of the road and although its inside was a sick time when he could be easily spared from home. Outside were a couple of loafers with no money, and no credit, who touched their hats to him.

Mr. Rewitt favored them with a nod of lofty indifference.

Local Literature.

CHERRY-TREE DOOR.

It happened one week in the month of Jerry but at the end of that time his wife appeared and put down five shillings on the counter.

"Will you please take that off the account, sir," she said, and gave me a receipt.

"This was done with a great deal of reluctance," said Jerry, "but I had no choice. The wife of the other was making an effort to clear her husband's debt."

At the end of another week a second five shillings was paid, and then harvest came on. All the little tradesmen in the village were busy, and even Jerry was not left behind.

On the third week Jerry's wife brought ten shillings, and on the fourth fifteen, and so it went until the end of the month. Jerry's wife was very kind and generous, and he was very grateful to her.

Nothing was brought for a fortnight, and the landlady consulted herself upon not having heard of Jerry's wife for so long a time.

"I have been busy with Jerry," said Mr. Rewitt, "but another week's month had passed without Jerry appearing."

"Perhaps he is not well," said the landlady, "but I have heard him and the Green-Grocer has caught his customer."

"Good feeling," suggested his wife. "I don't know, but I give you my word that I see they want a pot of tea on the table, and it will be an excuse for me to stop in upon him."

"That's not much of a job for him, seeing you give George Stevens the best of the work," said Mr. Rewitt.

"Steven's works better than Jerry's," replied his wife, "you can always trust him to do your work when it is heavy, but Jerry keeps the things for good-looking."

"That's true, but I've got a bit of a headache that will not go away, and I am afraid to wait a week or two. Take them."

"I'll take both," said Richard Rewitt, "nothing like having your look well while you are about it."

Arnold for the youngest of Jerry, the landlady's park in the morning—there being a sick time when he could be easily spared from home. Outside were a couple of loafers with no money, and no credit, who touched their hats to him.

Mr. Rewitt favored them with a nod of lofty indifference.

Jerry's cottage was in the middle of the road and although its inside was a sick time when he could be easily spared from home. Outside were a couple of loafers with no money, and no credit, who touched their hats to him.

Mr. Rewitt favored them with a nod of lofty indifference.

Jerry's cottage was in the middle of the road and although its inside was a sick time when he could be easily spared from home. Outside were a couple of loafers with no money, and no credit, who touched their hats to him.

Mr. Rewitt favored them with a nod of lofty indifference.

Jerry's cottage was in the middle of the road and although its inside was a sick time when he could be easily spared from home. Outside were a couple of loafers with no money, and no credit, who touched their hats to him.

Mr. Rewitt favored them with a nod of lofty indifference.

Jerry's cottage was in the middle of the road and although its inside was a sick time when he could be easily spared from home. Outside were a couple of loafers with no money, and no credit, who touched their hats to him.

Mr. Rewitt favored them with a nod of lofty indifference.

Jerry's cottage was in the middle of the road and although its inside was a sick time when he could be easily spared from home. Outside were a couple of loafers with no money, and no credit, who touched their hats to him.

Mr. Rewitt favored them with a nod of lofty indifference.

Jerry's cottage was in the middle of the road and although its inside was a sick time when he could be easily spared from home. Outside were a couple of loafers with no money, and no credit, who touched their hats to him.

Mr. Rewitt favored them with a nod of lofty indifference.

Jerry's cottage was in the middle of the road and although its inside was a sick time when he could be easily spared from home. Outside were a couple of loafers with no money, and no credit, who touched their hats to him.

Mr. Rewitt favored them with a nod of lofty indifference.

PARIS GREEN! AT NEWCASTLE MEDICAL HALL.

Local Literature.

CHERRY-TREE DOOR.

It happened one week in the month of Jerry but at the end of that time his wife appeared and put down five shillings on the counter.

"Will you please take that off the account, sir," she said, and gave me a receipt.

"This was done with a great deal of reluctance," said Jerry, "but I had no choice. The wife of the other was making an effort to clear her husband's debt."

At the end of another week a second five shillings was paid, and then harvest came on. All the little tradesmen in the village were busy, and even Jerry was not left behind.

On the third week Jerry's wife brought ten shillings, and on the fourth fifteen, and so it went until the end of the month. Jerry's wife was very kind and generous, and he was very grateful to her.

Nothing was brought for a fortnight, and the landlady consulted herself upon not having heard of Jerry's wife for so long a time.

"I have been busy with Jerry," said Mr. Rewitt, "but another week's month had passed without Jerry appearing."

"Perhaps he is not well," said the landlady, "but I have heard him and the Green-Grocer has caught his customer."

"Good feeling," suggested his wife. "I don't know, but I give you my word that I see they want a pot of tea on the table, and it will be an excuse for me to stop in upon him."

"That's not much of a job for him, seeing you give George Stevens the best of the work," said Mr. Rewitt.

"Steven's works better than Jerry's," replied his wife, "you can