GOXEY AT THE CAPITAL.
The Army Reach Washington and Camp in Driving Park.
WASHINGTON, April 30.—Citizen James Goxey, commander-in-chief of the good roads army of the commonwealth, standing on a rickety wagon in the centre of the Brightwood driving park, waving aloft his alpine hat to one of the most cosmopolitan and extensive audiences ever gathered in Washington, announced yesterday afternoon the greatest march of the nineteenth century had been accomplished. They arrived in Washington yesterday.

Three hundred and a half of miserably dressed, woe-begone, grumbling, out at the elbows and run down at the heel specimens of humanity marched into the park led by a wheezing apology for a band, pitched tents and stretched themselves in the sun. Thousands from the city turned out to make a holiday of it and inspect the curious aggregation. In the centre of the half-mile race track flapped the canvas enclosures which encircled the quarters of the commonwealth army. Half a dozen weather-beaten army tents stood about the canvas drawn circle with several canvas covered commissary wagons. Tents and wagons were covered with black and white legends which were a queer mixture of good roads, re-incarnation and fancy. The great Percheron horses were tethered about the wagons. Near by were fastened two large American flags and the emblematic banners were piled on the grounds. Most interesting of sights, however, were the human elements, the men who had marched and borne the brunt of mud and storms and cold. They were the most unique and inexplicable aggregation ever brought together. Some of them were at work about the tents and wagons, others curled up on the damp ground munching great chunks of bread, and many more stretched sleeping in the sun with their heads pillowed on rolled up coats. Over in the most pretentious tent, where the sign "Headquarters" painted across it, were found the leaders of the army, Gen. Goxey and Marshal Browne. The marshal busied himself in changing his buckskin suit for a more conventional black cutaway in preparation for the services, which were about to begin. In an interview, Goxey said they intended to enforce their right to peacefully assemble at the capital and petition congress. If interfered with, they would appeal to the highest courts in the land. During the afternoon a meeting was held, and Goxey addressed his men and the meeting declared: "We'll stay here all summer until congress acts on these bills that we ask for. I believe they will be passed in two weeks. You only have to pick up the paper to see what desperats these men are coming to, to get to Washington. Look at the trains that have been seized. I don't believe in lawlessness. No, far from it. It makes no difference if they don't get here on Tuesday, we will get the money and make our demands and come back here to camp and wait. This revolutionary spirit of '76 is making the money lenders tremble now. Congress takes two years to vote on anything if left to itself. Twenty millions of people are hungry and can't wait two years to eat. Gen. Goxey declares that his army will march to the capital on Tuesday noon, hold its great mass meeting on the steps to get the passage of his bills and return to camp and wait till they become law."

EARTHQUAKES IN GREECE.
Over Three Hundred People Killed in One District Alone.
ATHENS, April 28.—Slight shocks of earthquake still continue in this city and vicinity and the feeling of terror among the people is increasing. Despatches from other parts of Greece show that the damage and loss of life have been very much greater than told by the meagre advices received last night. Two women were killed by a falling building during last night's shock at Drachmani, near Divida. The ground is sinking at Atanti, where fully four-fifths of the houses are in ruins. Of these that remain standing, not one is habitable. The people are terror-stricken and in great distress through exposure and want of food and clothing.

APPELLING LOSS OF LIFE.
LONDON, April 29.—A despatch from Athens says: The loss of life on Friday night last must have been very great. Reports from all the districts have not yet been received, but the minister of the interior has received advices showing that in the Locris district alone, three hundred persons were killed. Two hundred and thirty-three bodies had already been recovered, and the work of searching for the others is being actively pursued under the direction of officials of various towns. About three hundred persons were injured. Everything is being done to alleviate the distress, and the government is spending money with unpardonable hand in the purchase of provisions. Large quantities of lumber have also been purchased and sent to the afflicted districts in order that shelters may be erected for those whose houses are now in ruins. Many rich Greeks have contributed largely for the relief of their countrymen, but notwithstanding this public and private assistance, there is bound to be much suffering among the poor.

For small groceries, we force them to yield as a daily remittance to compensate us for our trouble and care. In this way we have a two fold profit. These plants which we grew to secure nitrogen we feed to our cattle. They carry a high percentage of milk ingredients and are of affecting a process of putting them back on our land for future crop. With this system we find PROFITABLE WORK ON OUR FARMS twelve months of the year. The great object in the past winter dairying was the question of food. That question in a great measure has been solved. You have heard much about corn ensilage. The Robertson mixture which has been experimented with the last year by practical farmers has proved successful. The plants composing that mixture viz: corn, English hore bean and sunflower, contain in large proportion the essentials necessary for the production of milk, and it can be grown much cheaper than any other food to be able to take advantage of this effort of the society. Mr. Sheep was also requested to get wholesale prices for all kinds of farm seeds, and report at the April meeting.

Look at the iron bands which encircle our continent, which branch off and intersect every section of our country. These telegraphic systems which bring us in close touch with foreign markets; these prodigious structures of wood and steel which carry freight and passengers across the vast waters of our oceans; the goods these belong to our business. Think of the millions who form the population of our active manufacturing towns. They are depending on the farmer for their daily bread. The farmer is the man who must keep this gigantic commercial wheel steadily revolving. We look upon these facts in their true sense, and we are imbued with a strong incentive power to become more deserving of our business. In the province of New Brunswick we are somewhat behind in agriculture when compared with the other provinces. The reason is we have not been forced to depend on our farms entirely for maintenance, but engaged more particularly in lumbering. In a measure, agriculture has been neglected. Now our forests are being rapidly cut away and we are forced to direct our energies more especially to farming and are fast finding out that in this industry we have a more independent and remunerative business. Agriculture is the art on the scientific cultivation of the soil, the power to utilize the heat of the sun, and to harness the power of the winter frosts, all to our own advantage. It does not simply mean seed and harvest. In clearing up these vast tracts of country, muscular strength and endurance were the things most needed; now, since our farms have passed from the virgin state, we must resort more to mental power, that is, the power to manage our climatic conditions so as to give the best possible results. For instance, the air is charged with nitrogen (an excellent plant food) waiting around ready to be used by the farmer if he takes the necessary precaution to secure it. The plants most susceptible to storing nitrogen are beans, peas and clover. One important process is to take this valuable plant food from the atmosphere and put it back into the ground by the farmer. He can produce beef, pork, milk, eggs, wool and mutton. Now we approach what we agreed in our convention was as I know you will get more pounds of wool. But the necessity they have shed during lambing time, but the farmer has got to fit his business to existing circumstances. Last year lambing was very cheap and had I had early lambs for market in July, I could have had a good price; so this year my lambs are coming a month earlier. To make this change you must lay your plan accordingly. It was decided at the convention that roots were the best extra feed to give to have the ewes in the best possible condition at the lambing period. As soon as the lambs are old enough to eat, fresh grass which is a few weeks—a place should be fixed for them into which the sheep cannot get. I took one of my lambling pens and put a small trough around the wall about eight inches from the floor; I then made a slat door at the bottom of the trough and put in a board for the sheep to stand on. I give them about two quarts of whole oats to ten or fifteen lambs. They will soon learn to eat; if they are backward let in one of the mothers who will soon learn them. This plan I found very beneficial in following years. I have noticed the strain in the mother. If the extra lambs are to be raised the ewes should be brought through the winter in good condition. Lambs dropped in the late spring are very apt to be neglected. It is a question whether there is not a greater per cent of loss of lambs than with those that come early. The reason for this is that the farmer who raises early lambs takes better care of his flock than those who raise late lambs. In raising sheep the male means half the flock. Therefore it is necessary to have a good one. Do not let a few dollars stand between you and a good animal, both in pedigree and individuality. It is the difference between success and failure. Now as regards the different breeds of these factors I have mentioned, it is impossible for any one to determine.

FEEDING LAMBS.
The Wisconsin experiment station has been testing the effect of feeding grain to lambs, and has concluded:
1. It pays to feed lambs before they are weaned, all the grain they will eat when on good blue grass or clover pasture with their dams. This conclusion is endorsed by a previous trial.
2. When the ewes have been properly fed during the winter, so as to be in good condition at lambing time, it does not pay to feed them grain when on good pasture with the grain of securing more rapid and profitable gains in the lambs.
Another experiment was made with cotton seed meal compared with oil meal, and is summarized as follows:
1. For feeding lambs a grain mixture of oil meal and corn meal gave better results than a grain mixture of cotton seed meal and corn meal.
2. The lambs fed the oil meal made a greater gain than those receiving the cotton seed mixture. During the ten weeks' trial the lambs fed the oil meal ration each made a weekly gain of 2.50 pounds.
3. The oil meal ration was, in addition cheaper; for the lambs so fed made 100 pounds gain at a cost of $2 or 2 cents per pound, while those getting the cotton seed ration made 100 pounds gain at a cost of $3.00 or 31 cents per pound.

SIMPLY WAITING.
You ought to be ashamed of yourself! she exclaimed to the tramp, who had stopped at the door. You ought to have some steady calling.
I have me perfection, he replied, with quick haunter.
Well, why under the sun don't you get to work at it? You're right in the prime of life.
I know it. That's jes' what the matter is. I'm an infant prodigy, an I've gotter wait fur me second childhood before I kin resume business.
A MENTAL RESERVATION.
What do you think Mr. Billings said to me, yesterday? said the girl.
I don't know, replied the other.
He asked me if he might hope to become my guide through the vicissitudes of life.
What did you tell him?
I told him "Yes." But I spelled it "guyed."
A WISE WOMAN.
Mr. Trotter—Why did you place Foster and Bellipottee each other at a dance? Don't you know they are bitter enemies?
Mr. Trotter—That's just it. I did it on purpose. They spent so much time glaring at each other that they couldn't eat much.
