The Exchange Bank Robbery

An abedient majority of 37 voted to whitewash the Minister of Finance last night. In a speech, remarkable for perspicuity and moderation, Sir Richard Cartwright exposed the gross dishonesty of the transactions between Sir S. L. Tilley and the Exchange Bank.

Does anybody imagine for a moment that Sir Samuel L. Tilley would be such a consummate fool as to put $100,000 of his own private fortune into a bank which he knew was rotten?

Suppose he was a trustee of private property, and that he was to be held in the way described by the minister in the courts as thief? Would not the minister be liable to criminal prosecution?

SINKAT CAPTURED.

Nearly all the Starving Soldiers Meet their Death.

The Rebel Massing Near Suakin—An Attack Expected.

LONDON, Feb. 12.—It is reported that the rebels have captured Sinkat. Official despatches confirm the capture of Sinkat. For a long time the chief of the garrison was successful in repelling the rebel attacks, but at last the attacking forces gained the upper hand, and the garrison was completely destroyed except a few who were made prisoners.

For a fortnight the heroic garrison at Sinkat has been eating roots and tree leaves. It was an embellished band which sortied to die amidst the rebel hordes. Tewfik Bey harangued his men, saying that fighting they might save themselves, but by remaining they must die from hunger in a few days.

General Gordon telegraphs that in spite of Baker Pasha's defeat he is still sanguine of success. He has appointed Col. Cochrane commander at Khartoum and has sent fresh messages to the sheikhs to meet him.

The Paris press pretends to doubt England's power now to protect Egypt against Ad Mahdi, much less to accomplish her purposes in the Sudan.

The disaster to Baker Pasha's army caused nothing like the sorrow which spread among Englishmen here over the massacre at Sinkat. There is a universal feeling of humiliation and shame that the gallant men of Sinkat were killed almost within sight of the British ships.

Port Said, Feb. 12.—Three men-of-war have been ordered to convey British reinforcements to Suakin.

There never was a night without a day, for every day was a night.

Two boys went to hunt grapes. One was happy because they found grapes. The other was unhappy because the grapes had seeds in them.

Two girls went to play. One said, I am better to-day. The other said, I was better yesterday.

When it rains one boy says, This will make mud. Another, This will lay the dust.

One of the best ways to cure a cold in the head is as follows: Take a glass of hot lemonade. Then undress in a warm room, and sit with the body wrapped in a blanket and the feet in a tub of mustard and hot water.

One of the best methods to cure round shoulders is as follows: Every morning before or after breakfast, select an empty corner—a place where the hands can be supported in best—place the hands on the wall and move backwards and forwards, keeping the hands firm.
