If I choose to allow Captain Grant to call me by my Christian name, or any other name, what is that to you? You may be the guardian of my money, but," resting her eyes firmly on his, "you are not the guardian of me!" There is suppressed defiance in her whole air. Wortley looks back at her.

No. thank heaven! She laughs, a short and most unmirthful laugh.

You are very frank." "What is the use of being anything else? You know what this unlucky position I am in is to you, and you must see what it is to me. To have control even of your money is bad enough. If I could get out of this arrangement which, for my sins, I have got into, believe me, for both our cakes, I would do it at once." She gives him a swift glance, and colors scarlet. At this moment she could almost have killed him.
