WHERE HONOR IS DUE

[Copyright: 1912.]

I wish that I had distribution of a few of the Carnegie hero medals. would pin them upon the worn and weary beasts of the men and women who are fighting the tattle of life with blunt weapons.

There is heroism for you! There is courage for you, there is loyalty here is victory wrested out of defeat, greater than any poet ever sung. Anybody with a drop of red blood in his veins can lead a forlorn hope with the hand playing in his ears, and the mob cheering behind him. Anybody in a moment of impulse can dash into a burning house, lunge into the water to save a life. Anybody can be faithful to a trust in the face of a single temptation. Anybody, with health and strength, and intelligence, and talent, and owerful friends can achieve success.

"God," said Napoleon, "is on the side of the heavy artillery." It is easy to win the battle when you have the big army, and the heavy rtillery, and all the newest munitions of war, and a well-stocked commis-

But how great the valor of those who also win who have no big guns, as skilled leaders, who fight on empty stomachs, whose muskets are obsolete, vhose swords are dull!

I would not rob the brilliant, and clever, and strong of one laurel leaf, but the lustre of their achievements dim before those of the men and women who, without talent, without health or strength, have still done their part They are those who have fought the battle of life with dull weapon

As I write these lines I am thinking of one of these heroes. He is a little lingy, dried up old bacheler, whose atilities have never taken him higher than a clerk's stool in a counting room. He has seen hundreds of tright young fellows pass him in the race for success, and he knows they look upon him as a failure. That is the way he

He cannot do things swiftly. His hands are clumsy. Ideas come to him lowly. He can only work patiently, and faithfully, and honestly. These are not the qualities that insure promotion, but they hold down job, and on the meagre wage that he has earned he supported a household of helpless old women who were left dependent on him. He is one of those heroes who has fought the lattle with blunt weapons And I think of still another-a man, who, without education, menial occuration for weary hours every way, and then does extra wor at night in order that his children may have better advantages than he had His shoulders are bent under the burden he carries, his hands are knotte

He is worn with labor until his very soul faints with weariness, but he eeps his children at school instead of putting them to work to help him. He is giving every ounce of strength he has to lifting them up about is own head. He is another of those who are fighting the lattle of li

And I think of a woman who was a pretty, petted, spoiled coustomed in her youth to every comfort and luxury. While still a firl she married a drunken trute who atused and misused her, and finally leserted her, leaving her renniless with a six-month-old baby in her arms and two old women dependent upon her. This woman had never done a day's work in her life. She had no trade or profession, nor especial aptitude at anything. She was not clever, and she was frail in body, yet she went travely and cheerfully to work at a irst job that offered itself, but it has never even occurred to her to turn he back upon those who clung to her skirts, or to give up the fight, Somehow, despite ill health, despite lack of much intelligence, she has managed to care for her own without asking anyone's help. The wolf has never been more than an arm's length away from her door, but with her poor ittle blunt weapons she has kept it at bay. And I think also of another woman, a little ignorant country dressmake unskilled she does not even ask first-class prices. There is no magi such in her fingers, no artistic sense of color in her taste. She can only do plain, honest, ill-paid rewing. But for years and years she supported an invalid husband who died be inches of a lingering disease. Then when he was gone, and she toilsomel paid the last cent of the funeral and doctor's bills, a railroad accident kille her brother and wife and left seven children with only her to stand between

AN ADMIRABLE ADDRESS

By Mrs. Phillips, Noted English Suf fragist on "Entities and Non-Entities."

Teachers' Guild, of London, was given on Saturday afternoon in the Norma tily decorated with daffodils and jon-George's School proved most efficien waitresses. At the close of the luncheon an admirable address was given by Mrs. Harry Phillips, who, with her hisband is here for the purpose of nteresting Canadian women in the suffrage movement. Miss Evans, president of the guild, introluced Mrs. Phillips to those present avoidably absent, had expressed their stating that, as she formerly belong-willingness to become officers if it was ed to the profession, she should prove particularly interesting to teachers.

Entity and Non-Entity.

Mrs. Phillips spoke on the subject of "Entities and Non-entities," and stated that much responsibility rests with the mother and teacher in the encouraging originality of thought and expression. "There are people that are conscious that life is something to be lived, and ever; moment they give of their own personality and attributes to others. These are the entities. Others just jog along, using public opinion and conventional ideas, and shirking every part on new thoughts because they are mentally lethargic Many of the most important changes in this world's history have been brought about by the pioneer thinked criticism, and even martyrdom for the advancement of their cause. In every child there is that latent seed of personality and individuality which the teacher and parents must endeavo to draw out and develop." stated Mrs Phillips. She also remarked upon the frivolity and triviality of some women the ice for an hour, then serve in a and urged those present not to become the characteristics of entity were stated. To be an entity, one must possess peronality-some peculiar among one's fellows. There must also be reverence, in which the speaker in cluded respect for the opinions and views of others. Optimism, repose and persistence were also pointed out as being traits of an entity. have a really virile people, living self expressedly, things will not progress. Evolution has been slow because people have been content to live by pattern set by someone else. I would like," said Mrs. Phillips, in conclusion, "to see everyone an entity-living out their individual lives as God intended them to, and thus fulfilling his divine
