Mr. Shutt appeared in a moment, have already been sworn, Mr. Shutt Mr. Fullerton. "I have two accounts Godson & West's fer 250 yards of gray plied for the Exhibition-road. The certified to by Mr. Shanly as correct whose information did he rely when so?"

Accountant Shutt: "I am sure I coll you. It is a long time ago, and was I cannot recollect." It must ha A Dead Man Named Benison. At this moment Inspector Lackie, vieft the chamber for a few minutes, r and addressed the Court: "I recollect Honor, now who had charge of the won was a man named Denison, the sor rich man Denison. He died last rich man Denison. He died last Winnipeg.

The Judge: "Mr. Cooper, do you anything about a man named Denison? Cooper: "No. I do not. My impreshat it was Lackie all the time."
Inspector Lackie: "I positively that I had nothing to do with that joh. The Works books were examined by Gross, but us clue could be got as party who had cartified in the first plue correctness of the contractors bills, while Mr. Fullerson had been scrutiniz account, and suddenly his eyes lit initials W. L. in the corner of the "Ah," he exclaimed, "after all we will to find out from Mr. Lackie who cert the correctness of this bill. Mr. splacing the paper in the inspector's "are those your mintals?"
The inspector's eyes wandered over the corner of the supplementation of the suppl "are those your mittals?"

The inspector's eyes wandered over face of the paper and he replied he couse any initials.

"Do not cover them with your thum answer," exclaired Mr. Fullerton.

The inspector looked confused, but he gazed at the two letters: "I can whether they are or not. It is a long of the service I know. The papers may ha shoved before me."

The Judge: "Are you so loose init that of your office that you would init thing that happened to be shoved befor The Inspector: "I cannot say."

Mr. Fullerton: "Are those initials y not?"

not?!

Inspector Lackie: "They look like but it is so long ago that I cannot self.

Mr. Fullerton: "Yet you had the to contradict Mr. Cooper when he a had something to do with it."

The Judge: "Mr. Lackie, do you we to believe that the presence of your initiat raper is not there as a warrant being correct?" It Was So Long Ago.

I have no recollection of the matter."

Mr. Fullerton: "I will follow Your question a step further. Mr. Lackie the late Mr. Shanly accept the pre-
