The special committee in the matter of Ashridge's Bay met yesterday to wrestle with the subject. Ald Ritchie was in the chair. Present: Ald. Small, Leslie, Saunders. Carlyle (St. Thos.). McDougall, Civil Engineer Redway and Mr. Beavis, father of the scheme. The City Solicitor, as stated yesterday, wrote that the proposed improvement would have to be legalized by special legislation before it could be assessed against the property benefited as a local improvement. After a great deal of discussion it was resolved, on motion of Ald. Small:

That, whereas the City Engineer has reported to reclaim Ashbridge's Bay it would cost $5,000,000, and whereas according to the statement of Beavis & Redway it would cost $4,500,000 to do the same work according to the plans and specifications prepared therefor by the City Engineer and now deposited in his office; and whereas the said Beavis & Redway have offered in writing to do the work so specified if the city will allow them to have the sole use of the land to be reclaimed for the space of 45 years, at the end of which period they are willing to contract to hand over to the city the same land free of any encumbrance that may in the meantime be created by them thereon; therefore, the whole question is whether the work of reclaiming Ashbridge's Roy where the gentlem?

A new difficulty, however, has bouned up. The millers, under the instigation of other bakers, it is said, have refused to sell him flour. The World called on Mr. Milligan to see what his lection would be in the matter. He did not care to discuss the situation, but said: "You amy say this much: I am determined to sell at my prices, and if the bakers put me to the inconvenience of going outside of the city for my flour I will reduce my price to 11 cents. It is probable, if the millers do not supply ne, that I shall lower my price next week. I lo not care to give the names of the millers to not care to give the names of the millers who refused to supply me with flour."

Toronto Journalism, No city in the world supports, and supports liberally, so many morning papers, ports liberally, so many morning papers, population being considered, and as newspapers The Globe, Mail, Empire and World take high rank. Besides the morning journals there are two or three evening papers of merit. On the whole, Toronto has just cause of pride in her able and enterprising journals—papers, by the way, although bitterly opposed on politics, always present a solid phalanx where the interests of Toronto are concerned.

The above were the principal officers who yesterday assisted in opening the annual fair of the Agricultural and Arts Association at Glen Grove Park. The weather was certainly not ausploious at 10 a.m. when the fair was announced to commence. A leaden sky and threatening clouds lay over the grounds of Glen Grove Park and a drizzling rain fell incessatifly upon the track where the races were to take place. Notwithstanding these depressing circumstances, the one-times hold homestead of James Beaty, once the editor of the defunct Toronto Leader, was crowded by noontide with a schoolchildren and rustic visitors to the fair. A good many city people were there too. During the interval in which these good people were waiting for the events the judges and directors regaled themselves with a substantial lunch served in a neighboring mansion.

Dr. Hunter concludes, in the present issue of the Times, his first series of essays upon diseases of the throat and lungs. That they have been read widely and with profound interest we have every reason to believe; and while many of the writer's views conflict with those of the profession at large, they have certainly commended themselves quite generally to the popular judgment. Many instances of successful cures, effected under his prescriptions, have been brought to our motice. Success is the test in medicine, as in war. To this test the system of Dr. Hunter has been put, and with the most surprising results.

After an interval of a few weeks a new series of papers, devoted entirely to the discussion of asthma, will appear from Dr. Hunter's pen. His discoveries in regard to that disease are said to be highly important.

Shawnigan Lake and Cowlehan, and at once felt it their duty to pepper his bruinship, says The Victoria Colonist. There were nine bullets lodged in his body before he gave up the light for life, and then his captors had the task of carrying his carcase a couple of miles to the railroad track. He is a splendid specimen of the black bear, is about 5 years old and weighs 300 pounds. Properly stuffed he would make a handsome addition to the Provincial museum, but already a number of private people are making high bids for the skin.
