"Although differing from the Atlantic in its general form, being more nearly land-locked to the north, the Pacific Ocean resembles it, in being open to the south, forming, in fact, a great projection northwards of that vast Southern Ocean of which the Atlantic is another

"The Pacific is the largest expanse of water in the world, covering more than a quarter of its superficies, and comprising fully one-half of its water surface.

"It extends through 132 degrees of latitude—in other words, it measures 9,000 miles from north to south. From east to west its breadth varies from about 40 miles at Behring Strait, where Asia and America come within sight of each other, to 8,500 miles from California and China, on the Tropic of Cancer, and to more than 10,000 miles on the Equator, between Quito and the Molucens, where the ocean is the widest. The area has been variously estimated at from 50,000,000 to 100,000,000 square miles; but defining its boundaries as above, Keith Johnston, from careful measurement, estimated it, with probably a near approach to the truth, at 67,810,000 square miles."
