

great similarity of features and complexion appear in all parts of the country, through which we have passed. This affinity is evident in both the French and Indian settlements, and men and women of these respective tribes and nations, live happily together in domestic and matrimonial state. Their progeny marry together, as children of one common family. Was this virtuous and rational matrimonial alliance encouraged, by the European emigrants into the American regions north and south, many confusions and outrages would be prevented.

From this village we passed through French settlements into the upper province, and the townships possessed by the late loyal corps and the adventurers from Europe and the States. People of every language and nation, have come hither and formed prospering colonies. Heaven has blessed their labors, industry, and enterprize. Few have experienced greater success. The nation of England has fostered them with great care, and bestowed rations of provisions, clothing, materials for house building, husbandry tools, and continued the pay of the late officers and soldiers for three years. Each of the emi-
