If a man is to be judged by his pubham is what might be termed a broadshown a remarkable grasp of the transportation necessities of the coun- the allowance for maintenance of patry, and apparently has the courage to grapple boldly with questions of far ching importance to the welfare and progress of Canada. His statement that it may become necessary to deepen the Welland Canal is one that will meet with the approval of every man having a knowledge of the tremendous possibilities of the St. Lawrence route, but he should go further and provide a deep waterway right thru to the Atlantic Ocean.

The St. Lawrence River is the natural channel for the movement of traffic between the markets of the great west (including those of the United States), and the continent of Europe, and if it is made a deep waterway to the Atlantic Ocean, the Erie Canal can never become a formidable competitor for this trade. Provide a deep waterway to the Atlantic Ocean by way of the St. Lawrence, and Lake Ontario would teem with commerce, instead of lying as it is to-day, apparently useless for the purposes of navi-

Cheap transportation is necessary for the development of trade, and a deep waterway thru the Welland Canal and the St. Lawrence would place Canada indisputably in control of the carrying trade between the west and Europe.

The Trent Valley Canal as a channel of commerce is, and always will be, useless, and had the money wasted in that enterprise been spent in deepening the Welland Canal and the St. Lawrence route, Canada would have had something of value to show for the expenditure.
