HENRY CHUTE IS DROWNED IN HARBOR HERE

Believed Steamer Fireman Took Weak Spell and Fell Over Wharf

CORONER DECIDES AGAINST INQUEST

Victim Was Nova Scotian of Crew of Granville III

Last seen alive by his shipmates at 7 o'clock this morning walking toward the face of Thorne's wharf off Water street, the body of Henry Chute, a fireman on the bay steamer Granville III, was recovered from the waters of the harbor with the aid of grappling irons at 11:05 o'clock. The unfortunate man lived at Hampton, Annapolis county, N. S., and is survived by his wife and six or seven children. He had been subject recently to weak spells and it is thought that he fell over the wharf when attacked by one of these. Coroner William Warwick viewed the body and decided that an inquest was not necessary.

The fireman ate his breakfast as usual this morning, a member of the crew of the steamer, and then apparently went for a walk along the wharf. He was in his shirt sleeves and was wearing a little skull cap used by firemen. So far as can be learned, he was not seen alive again. The fact that his watch was found to have stopped at 6:08 o'clock, the crew going by old time, showed that he fell into the water very soon after he disappeared from the view of the crew of the steamer.

When the man did not return within an hour or so the captain of the vessel became uneasy as the fireman was a very steady man and was always on duty. A search failed to reveal any trace of him so the police authorities were notified.

THE POLICE WERE TOLD

Sergeant Detective Power and Detective Biddiscombe secured two sets of grappling irons and two boats and commenced to drag in front of the wharf and also in the slip. After about 15 minutes' work the body of the man was pulled up by the irons operated by Walter Brown caught in the clothing of the man and he was brought to the surface about 18 feet out from the face of the wharf. The body was then lashed to the stern of the boat and was towed to the steps at Market Slip and laid on top of the wharf.

Coroner Warwick gave permission for removal to Brenzner undertaking parlors. He said that an inquest was not necessary.

HAD WEAK SPELLS

Captain E. S. Collins of the Granville III said this morning that the unfortunate man had been a fireman on the steamer for about four years. He declared that he had several weak spells within the last few days and he felt that this had probably been the cause of his falling into the water. The man was well known in Saint John as he had run here with the present steamer and previous to that time had served his same capacity on the Valinda for nine years. He leaves at Hampton his second wife and six or seven children. His first wife was burned to death about 14 years ago.

People who knew Mr. Chute declared that he was a quiet reliable man who always was on duty when needed. He was about 45 years of age.

St. Swithin's Day and Sun Shines Brightly

This is St. Swithin's Day, and the sun shines brightly. John Gay, a poet of the 17th century, wrote: "How if on Swithin's feast the welkin And every pantheone streams with hoary showers, Two heavy clouds shall cloud their faces drain And wash the pavements with incense rain."

The story goes that St. Swithin, who lived in the 11th century, so loved his church that he asked especially that he be buried under its eaves. This request was carried out, but later, because it occasioned some inconvenience, the body was removed to the cemetery. Immediately rain began to fall, and the countryside was in terror of flood and ruin of crops. Then someone recalled that the saint, who was greatly beloved, had stated that the heavens would weep if he were not buried where he had wished. The body was taken up and then the weather became normal. The name Swithin meant "strong friend," so Webster says.

As Him m Sees I

"Hiram," said The Times reporter to Mr. Hiram Hornbeam, "how do you spend your evenings now?" "Sitting 'stra wher-ries," said Hiram. "Sitting 'stra wher-ries," said the reporter, "you amaze me. Why like them?" "So's Hanner kin git 'em in the preserve," said Hiram. "That's the only way you kin git 'em in." "Are they as large as that?" quizzed the reporter. "Hit like punkins," said Hiram. "I never seen the best of it. A feller from town come out 'tother day to git 'em in the preserve, and he et one he didn't want no supper." "Hiram," said the reporter, "you don't expect the public to believe that?" "You won't git nobody out to The Seamen to deny it," said Hiram. "Then they ought to go to Florida or California," said the reporter. "If they want to them places," said Hiram, "they'd ov be in kindergarten class fer lying—By Him!"

EVERETT'S Furniture Sale

Are you an Optimist or a Pessimist? Do you look on the bright side of life and get a lot of fun out of the living, or do you forever see the dark clouds and make a noise like a grouch? An Optimist is a human being with a normal disposition who knows that, if it is raining today, the chances are that the sun will be shining tomorrow. If you are considering Furniture and Rugs for today only, probably you would not buy. But you are buying for years of the future—for the years of your life that are to come—for years that you hope will be filled with happiness. Folks! Listen to reason! This great sale is being held because business has been quiet, for the sole and distinct purpose of making it good! Prices, profits and costs have been sacrificed to make business good—to start the ball a-rolling. Don't you see that now is the time to buy? Don't you see what it will mean for you to look back a little later and say "My! I am glad that I bought Furniture and Rugs when prices were low!"
