The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON

HE eternal length of a rainy Sunday spent with a crowd of people who were comparative strangers to each other, impels me to a few remarks on the art of general conversation.

If you want to be welcome on rainy Sundays and similar occasions when conversation is the chief amusement, let me suggest that before you start to tell any ancedote you ask yourself: "Is it intrinsically interesting? That is, if it has no connection with myself or my friends, will it still be worth telling" And if you can't say, "yes," don't tell it.

I've often heard a bore defined as a person who talks about himself continually, but I don't think that's right. I know people who talk about themselves perpetually, but who are nevertheless very delightful companions. The point is they have had such interesting lives that what they tell about themselves is intrinsically interesting, that is, would be so even if it had no per-coin.

For instance, if a bright story about newspaper life is told, there is always someone to pipe up: "I have a friend who was a newspaper man once. He wrote the political news," or, if a picture of some beautiful spot is being admired the same variety of bore volunteers the absorbing information, "I was near there once when I was traveling for a shoe factory, but it was our busy season and I couldn't get the time to go over."

Remarks like that go well enough with people who have reason to be interested in you and your friends, and where you have or haven't been, but as general onversation with comparative strangers—well, they're certainly counterfeit currency, which only the obligation of politeness ever makes people accept as the real hing.

Stories involving for their comprehension much knowledge of any sort—of some business or sport, or locality, for instance—and told to people who do not possess that knowledge, are another variety of bad conversational coin. No one except a conversational genius can give brief explanations that really explain, and many a story or incident that is perfectly good when told to the right person, becomes an anmitigated bore when loaded down with explanations and foisted off on people who haven't the ghost of an idea what it all means, but who smile and say, "Yes, ves, I understand," just to get the agony over with.

There is plenty of mutual ground on which even complete strangers, if they have average intelligence, can meet.

There are enough personal anecdotes in most of our lives that are intrinsically interesting enough to be told even to strangers.

There is almost always some special common interest that any two or three people can find to talk about.

If people would realize these possibilities and limitations, and try to live up to them, and within them, it seems to me there would be far fewer bores in the having advocated old time Democratic principles in many of his recent addresses on his western tour. Referring to Col. Roosevelt's Ossawatomie (Kas.) speech on New Nationalism, Mr. Bryan'said: "The Democratic party has preached this doctrine fourteen years, and in 1900 incomplete fourteen years, and publicity appears to have just made the discovery that this doctrine is correct and progressive and just. In his expressions regarding railroad regulation, the income tax, swellen fortunes, and publicity of campaign contributions, Mr. Roosevelt has merely followed a well-established Democratic lead. For years Democrats have been clamoring for legislation in this direction."

lions in years before, the mystery of where the little coppers go still is unsolved, and Director Geo. E. Roberts estimated the big plant will turn out another 100,000,000 this year. Pennies, more so than any other sort of coin, disappear from circulation very mysteriously.

The government does not mind coining them, however, for they yield a fine profit: A pound of copper costing now about 13 cents, will make a dollar in pennies. The big stamping machines in the Philadelphia office will begin work too, next month, and several million dollars in gold bullion will be turned into bright new coins. The Denver mint began coining
