Coming to the large increase in our subscribers within the past few months we have been obliged to add new carriers, and to alter the boundaries of the carriers districts. Subscribers failing to receive their papers regularly will please give notice at this office at once, so that the mistake may be remedied.

THE TELEGRAPH ON DIET.

At the present exciting crisis in local political affairs, it might be supposed that the editor of the Telegraph would give his readers some information or tender them some advice, in regard to the questions about which every person in the city is talking. He might tell them, for instance, what share he had in promoting the candidature of Mr. Ritchie for the office of Police Magistrate, and he might give his views as to that gentleman's chances of retaining his post. But the man from Penobscot does not do this. He is less concerned in regard to what is to be done than he is as to the manner in which it will be done. He is a physician, and he knows that a very large dish of raw meat is being got ready for him to swallow, he calmly sits down and writes an article on "A vegetarian versus a meat diet." This article may possibly have a deeper meaning than appears on the surface and may be intended as a sort of request to the Attorney General not to compel him to eat too much of the meaty bit. In it he elaborates the theory that the flesh of beasts revivified by being eaten by man, enters into the human system the animal passions and appetites which war against the better qualities of man's mind and moral nature. This theory receives an apt illustration in the case of the editor of the Telegraph himself who stands as a conspicuous example of the baneful effects of a diet of raw meat. "It is notorious," says the Penobscotian, "that the editor of the Telegraph is a man who is a vegetarian versus a meat diet." This article may possibly have a deeper meaning than appears on the surface and may be intended as a sort of request to the Attorney General not to compel him to eat too much of the meaty bit. In it he elaborates the theory that the flesh of beasts revivified by being eaten by man, enters into the human system the animal passions and appetites which war against the better qualities of man's mind and moral nature. This theory receives an apt illustration in the case of the editor of the Telegraph himself who stands as a conspicuous example of the baneful effects of a diet of raw meat.
