

THE INDIAN'S MORNING SONG.

God of the sun, of light and day,
Hail O God! to thee we pray!
God of wood, of lake and river,
God! the everlasting ever!
Hearken to the Indian's song,
And let each tribe the notes prolong.

God of love, and God of wonder,
God of lightning and of thunder;
God of tempests, storms and torrents,
Of foaming falls and rapid currents,
Of the fall and fierce tornado—
God without a form or shadow:
God the red man's friend and father,
Before thee let us quickly gather,
Chief and vassal, sire and son,
Maid and mother—see! the sun
Rises god-like, broad and fulgent,
And bespeaks our God indulgent;
Then bow the head and bend the knee
And praise him, freest of the free!

Spirit of each rock and mountain—
Of wind and rain, of flood and fountain;
God of the Arch whose boundless span
Ensues a eternal hope to man;
God of the sky, the cloud and air,
Hearken to the red-man's prayer!

God of the fishes of yon lake—
Of birds and beasts in wild and brake—
Of cattle on a thousand hills,
And flowers watered by thy rills;
With nature's rich and ample store,
Bless the wigwag's humble door.

God of peace, and God of war—
God of yonder morning star,
Shield! O Shield! the Indian's life
Mist the battle's fiery strife;
And whither he dotes to roam
Safe conduct him to his home;
Harmless, midst each wood and wild,
In peace protect his wife and child.

God of endless time and space,
Long befriending the red-man's race;
Guard him from the white-man's chains—
The white-man's tortures, wiles and pains,
God of gods, and God of day,
Thus we praise, and thus we pray!

THE COUNSELOR'S SONG.

Och! love it is murder,
I wish it was funder;
On my oath I've a mind to get rid of my life—
I'm out of my senses,
Besides my expences,
Aed only because I'm in want of a wife!
The Widow Mahoney,
She was my crooney,
Only her heart was so hard and so stony.

CHORUS.

Arrah! widdy, says I, stop my bachelor's trade,
Or, as sure as you live, I will die an old maid.

II.

This widow so stoney,
Was stout, tall, and bon-ey,
Her husband he left her to plough the salt seas.
He plumped to the bottom,
His shiners she got 'em,
So, without botheration, she lived at her ease.

Och! a beautiful cratur,
As any in natur,
And just like myself too in every fature.

CHORUS.

Arrah, widdy, says I, stop my bachelor's trade,
Or, as sure as you live, I will die an old maid!

III.

I scorned to be scaly,
So I treated her daly,
As sure as the night came, with whiskey and tea;
And then in a noddy,
Her beautiful body
Was stuck, check by jowl, in the front behind me!

To finish the matter,
Mick Rooney was fatter,
And for that very reason he set his cap at her.

CHORUS.

Arrah, widdy, says Mick, stop my bachelor's trade,
Or, as sure as you live, I will die an old maid!

IV.

No longer they tarried,
But off to be married,
As thick as two sweeps, to the church they were sped;
When, who should be stalking,
To stop their church-walking,
But the widdy's live husband—the boy that was dead!

Poor Mick was confounded,
The widdy she scounded,
The men picked her up and the women surrounded—

FINALE.

So here am I left to my bachelor's trade,
And if none of yees tak me, I die an old maid.

NITROUS OXIDE, OR LAUGHING GAS.—The extraordinary powers of this gas were yesterday submitted for exemplification at St. Thomas's Hospital on the persons of some of the students. The question then was who would try it; for though all desired to see its effects, no one wished to be the first to feel them. At length the gentleman who prepared it put the pipe into his mouth, and closing his nostrils, inhaled a cordial out of the bladder. No mountain dew was ever so potent. In an instant he was twirling round the yard like a dervish in an enthusiasm, and laughing as obstreperously as if the spirit of all Joe Miller's jokes had been discharged upon him at once. The sight was irresistible upon the circle. Grave professors, merry students, and apprehensive spectators, burst into a cackling, laughing at the man in the middle, and at the odd faces they respectively made, until the venerable skeleton seemed once more shaking their sides in sympathetic glee. When this brief fit was over (for the effects of the gas soon terminate,) a muscular young fellow stepped forward to be helped to the second bumper. A copious draught was accordingly squeezed out of the bladder into his mouth. In an instant his face was as burnished as a new copper-kettle, and off he darted, overturning men and tables, with equal impetuosity, until he made his way into one of the amphitheatres, where he commenced the exordium of a Pindaric speech, and stopped, looking quite bashful, as he was commencing the third sentence. The next volunteer entertained the honourable company with a gallopade in the style of a dray-horse about the courtyard. Upon a succession of demonstrators it acted differently according to their tempers and constitutions; but one steady-looking student swallowed double as much as any other, and still remained as indifferent as the bladder from which he had imbibed it. Nitrous oxide, is the compound containing the smallest quantity of oxygen. It was discovered by Dr. Priestley in 1772, and by him denominated "dephlogisticated air." It consists of one volume of oxygen and two azote, and is produced by heating nitrate of ammonia in a glass retort. Most substances burn in it with far greater energy than in the atmosphere. Sir Humphrey Davy discovered its intoxicating qualities in 1799. It is colourless, sweetish, and of slightly agreeable odour.

Remarkable Cure of Asthma.—One day last week, Thomas Ridsdale, a small farmer at the village of Kexby, near this city, purchased of Mr. Bellerby, bookseller, a small bottle of Ponelli's Balsam of Aniseed, for the use of his daughter, a young woman, who had long been troubled with a severe cough and asthma; and who had tried the best medical advice that could be obtained, without finding any beneficial effects. A few days after, the farmer called on Mr. B. to return thanks, to use his own words, for a miracle "having been worked upon his daughter!"—who had not taken the medicine three hours before she felt herself greatly relieved; and, excepting her debilitated state, the consequence of her long affliction, she is, he says, as well as she ever was in her life—and apparently totally cured of her cough and asthma—not having been at all disturbed the two nights previous to his coming to York. She did not use all the medicine contained in the bottle; and the remainder was given to a neighbour, a respectable elderly female, who had long been troubled with an asthma, which prevented her from ascending a pair of stairs without resting. She has also been greatly benefited by taking the medicine. She particularly wished these facts to be made public.—Yorkshire Gazette.

MEG MERRILIES.—The subjoined inscription is to be found on the tombstone of Margaret Teasdale, of Mumpshill, in the churchyard of Upper Denton, near Gilsland, in Cumberland. Here lieth the body of Margaret Teasdale, or Humpshill, who died the 5th of May, 1777, aged 98 years. What I was once, some may relate; What I am now, is each one's fate; What I shall be, none can explain, 'Till he that called, call again.
