Advantage to American Millers.
The Minneapolis millers will undoubtedly be able to carry the load of the American millers. They are already they speak in glowing terms of American railways carrying our wheat to their mills and thence carrying it to the mills of the American people. The banks with increased deposits; factories turning out increased mill supplies; increased pay rolls for American labor; increased production of wheat for the miller; and the great development of the American wheat and flour trade. This is the situation that makes a community prosperous.

Referring to some apparent exceptions Mr. Borden instanced the statistics of the price of wheat south of the boundary line was higher than in Canada. Assuming that this was correct, to the farmer it can be demonstrated that if the wheat crops of the two countries are equal, the price must be upon an export basis especially in view of the increasing Canadian crop.

"I have dealt with care," continued Mr. Borden, "the evidence given during the past three months before the ways and means committee of the United States Senate and House of Representatives. The farmers and other producers in the United States have been heard at length before that committee in this respect and other matters, contrast to be observed. No opportunity has been given to any Canadian producer or consumer to be heard before any committee of parliament since this measure has been before the people.

"What do the farmers and exporters of the United States justify respecting the price of Minneapolis compared with that at Winnipeg? They demonstrate that the demand for certain grades of wheat by the millers of Minneapolis is so great that hard wheat is exported but that the whole product is used for mixing with softer wheat in order to turn out a certain grade of flour. The demand for wheat of the northwestern states is not on an export basis and the relative price at Minneapolis is higher than at Liverpool.

"A Michigan farmer put it in this way: 'The Canadian farmer is doubtless expecting that reciprocity will enable him to get better prices for his wheat but in this he is sadly mistaken. He would only be furnishing a club to the American farmer. The tariff of the American farmer. Until the adjustment of reciprocity, Minneapolis millers paid practically as much for No. 1 Northern wheat as it was quoted at in Liverpool. If 50,000,000 bushels of Canadian wheat is thrown on our markets, this wheat with the aid of the 'bears' would drive prices for wheat down to the level of Liverpool and the Canadian farmer would sorely regret the reciprocity agreement.

"If this great body of Canadian wheat is dumped on our market, the 'bears' will not be able to carry the load, and the 'bears' will force prices below the living point for the farmer, and instead of Liverpool making the prices for the American 'bear' will have that effect; then the Canadian wheat as well as the American farmer will unite in denouncing reciprocity as the greatest curse that was ever put upon both countries.

"If the wheat production of the two countries is pooled, the total surplus for export will immediately run well above the Canadian surplus. It is idle to expect that under these conditions the price of wheat will not be upon an export basis. It is idle to expect that the price at Minneapolis will maintain the relative advantage over that of Liverpool which it enjoys at present.

"May we not reasonably ask why this development in Canada should place in Canada rather than in the United States? The miller who will be the miller of the American flour trade. Is there any reason why the Canadian miller should not be the miller of the future? Is there any reason why Canadian mills and Canadian flour should be the only flour and the great wheat crop of our own country?"

It is idle to expect that the price at Minneapolis will maintain the relative advantage over that of Liverpool which it enjoys at present.

"May we not reasonably ask why this development in Canada should place in Canada rather than in the United States? The miller who will be the miller of the American flour trade. Is there any reason why the Canadian miller should not be the miller of the future? Is there any reason why Canadian mills and Canadian flour should be the only flour and the great wheat crop of our own country?"
