MR. S. D. SCOTT WRITES ABOUT LOCAL PRESS

(St. John Globe)

S. D. Scott, now editor of the News-Advertiser, Vancouver, and long in the editorial chair of the St. John Sun, was asked by the Globe to make a few notes for its issue of December 15. Mr. Scott cheerfully complied with the request, but by misadventure his manuscript did not arrive in time. As, however, his observations are of much interest to newspaper makers and readers in St. John, we think it well to print them.

Little is borne in upon me to say about "men and newspapers of twenty-five years ago." Before the Globe has asked for such reminiscences, I take the chance for the sake of paying my respects to one man and one newspaper. Fifty years is a long time in the life of a nation, longer in the life of an editor. I shall probably never have an opportunity to congratulate another Canadian journalist on half a century of continuous service as editor of the same journal. My own connection with the press of New Brunswick goes back thirty years, and with that of St. John twenty-six. Three years (1882-1885) I wrote in Halifax. In the east today I should be one of the seniors in the profession. Yet before I persuaded W. C. Miller to allow me to succeed him as editor of the Sackville Post, and while I was getting rid of all my native originality through the Mount Allison Arcton, the editor of the Globe seemed to me to be a veteran. Senator Ellis, who is now so much younger than his real age, then appeared older than his years. Moreover, young men do not know how young a man still is at twice their age. That instruction comes later, when they are ready enough to absorb it.

While the late Judge King still lived in St. John, he made an admirable speech in my hearing in which he dwelt, with that impetuous eloquence that sometimes came to him at such occasions, on the splendid traditions of the St. John press. He spoke particularly of three editors, none of them then far removed from the scene. There were Mr. Anglin, Mr. Elder and John Livingstone. The editor of the Globe, who was for a good many years a contemporary of these remarkable writers, will permit me, as this is a jubilee occasion, to place him with that group.

Mr. Anglin, as I recall the Freeman, was an exceeding serious and powerful writer, having strong and positive opinions, rather discouraging the lighter touches, and carrying with him a great weight of conviction. Dr. Elder gave the impression of scholarship and literary quality. Livingstone's work I know much better, since as his successor on the Sun, I have often gone over the files. It seems to me to have been the greatest campaign writer and editor ever produced in the Maritime Provinces. His friends' desecrated with in broken health he went to the great country. Somewhere I have a letter from him written shortly before his death in which he spoke of his longing for New Brunswick where he might again see the forest and hear the birds sing.

Outside the Globe office I believe there are none left in St. John of those who wrote editorials and news for the press when I went there from Halifax in the latter part of a century ago. Mr. J. E. B. McCredy, then editor of the Telegraph, who preserved the high traditions of that paper, and whose son now holds the same chair, is, I am glad to say, still an active and vigorous journalist in another city. Mr. Laurin, who had immediately preceded him in the editorial chair, and was at Fredericton twenty-five years ago, is now the effective editor of the Victoria Colonist, and in his great authority on the resources of British Columbia as he used to be on those of New Brunswick to those of the New Brunswick.

Dr. Hannay has passed away, leaving a more permanent record of his activities than the pages of a newspaper. My contemporaries in Halifax, Mr. Stewart, Mr. Henry Blackadar, and Mr. McQueen are to more, while Mr. Fielding has given to public administration the abilities that distinguished him as editor of the Chronicle. I would like here to pay a tribute to Mr. J. J. Stewart and to comrades of a former association in the Halifax Herald, one of the most genuine men I have ever known. When Mr. Stewart set himself seriously to a newspaper argument or discussion, he had few equals in Canada. His range of reading and intellectual interest was a perpetual astonishment to those who had a chance to discover it. But as he was fond of the kind of research of which he seldom wrote or spoke, the discovery was not made by all. Of the extent of his generosity and the depth of his sympathetic nature, only those most closely associated with him are now let me congratulate the Globe and its editor. Many will join in this message who, like myself, did so on the 5th and 40th anniversaries. There is no other daily paper in Canada so associated with one man as the Globe. There is no other institution so closely associated with the life of St. John in all its phases. The Globe has expressed many views and advocated many causes that were and mine. But they were the sincere utterances of one who has loved his own city and desired its welfare, and who in a thousand ways, has proved himself a good citizen. At times when the temptation to follow the lines of least resistance was strong the Globe was never among the opportunists. It has stood for public honor and uprightness and has sought to perform the first duty of a newspaper which is to tell the people the truth about the things of greatest human interest that are going on in the world.

DIDN'T GO TO FINISH.

(Cleveland Plaindealer)

"I found in cents this morning," confided Jimmy.

"Found a whole half dollar!" cried his mother. "How nice! What did you do with it?"

"Pete Jones was along, so I gave him half."

"Your dear generous boy! Did you do that of your own accord?"

"Yesum—well, we decided that 'would be right.'"

"Jimmy! He didn't whp you and make you give up half?"

"No, mamma. He led licked me, he'd had it all. The scrap was a draw."

GLUT REPORTED IN ELEPHANT MARKET

Number in Ceylon Increases Rapidly and Five Thousand There are Becoming a Grave Menace.

The number of elephants in Ceylon is increasing so rapidly, says Otago, that they are becoming a terror to the traveler, and a scourge to the planter. The latest estimate of the Forest Department placing their number at five thousand. The great natural value of the same has to be derived from the operation, considerable sport and more profit, for in Ceylon the elephant has a very real market value, for the same figures conspicuously in all ceremonies of religion and of State, but is employed in forest clearing, cultivation, irrigation and pretty much every other form of draught work, being, when properly trained, a useful and valuable animal.

When it is appreciated that the operations preliminary to a successful krait extend beyond a period of several weeks, that as many as 2,000 beaters are employed in the drive, that a dozen lives are sometimes lost and hundreds of men and animals are killed, it will be seen that kraiting is a sport only within the reach of kings, and of Kandyan kings at that. The very small number of Europeans who have witnessed these jungle round-ups is due to the fact that the scene of operations has from necessity to be laid in almost impenetrable jungle to reach which means no inconsiderable expenditure of money, time and temper, not to mention the backs of every primitive transportation and still more primitive accommodations—uncertain commissariat arrangements, and such minor annoyances as snakes, jungle ticks, leeches and mosquitoes.
