These are a few replies Miss Panks gave to questions. She is a notsome young woman, with pinkeeks, and sifted with a great deal reserve power. Her will is strong dif she were of royal blood she uild make a stately queen. Hereen blue eyes are bright as she swers questions, for she not only piles in words, but makes beer eyes eak and carry a message in their pressiveness.

She has been a champion of woman er since she was a little girl of five ars when her parents used to talk tout woman's suffrage evenings in represence.

She is confident women some day ill own the land and put men where eye must be considerate of women. "Where is Christabel?" I asked hen Miss Pankhurst had seated hers fif in the drawing room of the Coige Club on Commonwealth Ave. "I know but I'm not teilling about. Do you suppose for one moment at I would make this known?" exalined Miss Pankhurst.

"Christabel is directing the suffrage acvening the suffrage novement in England frou her secret twelling place. She is like other women in the suffrage movement of England, able to take care of herself, and he can puzzle the politic."

As To Window Smashing.

"Do you really believe in smashing windows?" I ventured.

"Of course we would be very glad to keep windows whole, but the milliant spirit in England is an aggressive one, and has taken this means of showing itself. Think how many windows men have broken in their efforts for reform." Then Miss Pankhurst began to talk about the Stuaris in England and went back to the Magna Charta to prove some of her points. She wove quite an argument from history to justify her position in breaking windows from the periods of past history.

"Why, you have the Bible for the past history."

"Why, you have the Bible for the instification of women using force," continued Miss Pankhurst. "Don't you remember what Jael, Heber's wife, did to Sisera. She took a hammer in her hand and put a nail into his temple, killing him. Why should women use force in those days for reform and not today?"
