

FOREWORD

This Memorial Tablet has been erected to commemorate, to those who did not know them, the men from the Hamilton Normal School who served in the Great War. Those who did know them need no reminder. Especially we remember those who gave their lives in the service of their country.

The loss of these young lives impresses on those who remain, the need of a whole-hearted service to the country and to humanity. They served in time of war even unto death; we can, at the very least, give our country true service as long as we live.

We cannot help thinking also of a better way of settling the world's troubles than by the horrible test of war, which demands the sacrifice of the best manhood of the world. Let us hope that the loss of the young manhood may lead to better relations among the nations of the world!
