Silage for Western Farmers

Two inches in winter and twice as much in summer is considered the minimum.
This quantity represented in silos of various diameters would run about as follows:

Silo diam.	Min. lbs. in winter	Silo diam.	Min. lbs. in winter in feet		in feet
8	150	14	960
10	250	16	1200
12	350	18	1520

The amount in summer according to the above calculation would just double this. The above and the following figures on average consumption of silage per day by different kinds of stock are from the Saskatoon Agricultural College:

Dairy cows	30 to 40 lbs. per day
Beef cattle	25 to 30 lbs. per day
Calves (500 lbs.)	10 to 12 lbs. per day
Horses	10 to 12 lbs. per day
Sheep	2 to 3 lbs. per day

These two sets of figures enable a calculation to be made of a proper diameter. A herd of 16 cows eating 30 lbs. per day each would need a 14 foot silo for winter. Of course some men insist that it is not necessary in our cold climate to remove as much as the above figures daily, but this would be a safe calculation for new builders. A smaller number of cattle or summer feeding would necessitate a silo smaller in diameter.
The height of a silo will depend on the days of feeding.

Capacity in Tons of Silos for Corn Silage

Depth of silo, feet	Inside diameter of silo, feet	10	12	14	15	16
20	26	38	51	59	67
21	28	40	55	63	72
22	30	43	59	67	77
23	32	46	62	72	82
24	34	49	66	76	87
25	36	52	70	81	93
26	38	55	74	85	97
27	40	58	78	90	103
28	42	61	83	95	108
29	45	64	88	100	114
30	47	68	93	105	119
31	49	70	96	110	125
32	51	73	101	115	131

Of course some other considerations creep in here. A large number find that silage freezes from 15 to 18 or more inches all around the wall so that by having the silo a little wider the proportion of frozen silage is not so large, and a little less height does as well. A certain amount of danger from wind is thus avoided, and as one Alberta subscriber wrote: "In this sunny part of the world where we get the gentle breezes when the silo is standing empty I would not go too far into the air with a stave silo. It is bound to get loose in the spring just at the busy season and may be forgotten. I would not go higher than 24 or 26 feet unless the location was in a corner where two buildings gave support and protection." It must not be forgotten, however, that greater pressure is secured in a silo not too wide and a better quality of silage made. Without there are a large number of cattle about 14 feet would probably be wide enough and certainly not over 16 feet. For summer or a small number of cattle, even narrower than either of these would do. Have the height about twice the diameter.

There are a number of companies building special wood stave silos that give good satisfaction or the lumber and hoops may be purchased and the whole affair put up by the farmer himself. When great care is not taken this often leads to dissatisfaction. The construction of wooden silos is well described in a bulletin, "Silos and Root Cellars," issued by the Agricultural College, Saskatoon, Sask., or one from the Manitoba Agricultural College, Winnipeg. These can be had

The Guide's "Farmers' Market Place" is planned so as to co-operate with the readers in affording them an economical opening to wider markets. A glance at this page will show the many departments into which it is divided. This affords the prospective buyer a quick method of referring to the section in which he will find offerings in the line he intends to buy. Naturally he will look over all the advertisements in that particular section before making his choice.
This means that every advertisement will be read by every prospective buyer. This is the strong advantage of this classified section.

Advertisements are given at the top of this page. Send in your order now accompanied by the amount for the number of times you wish your ad. to run, and let The Guide demonstrate to you, as it has to hundreds of other farmers, how it can sell.
