

NOVELTIES FOR LITTLE FELLOWS

By CHARLES W. GALLOWAY

Never in the history of the boys clothing industry has there been created for a season as many new models to appeal to the buyer of little fellows' clothes. The head of a boys' clothing department in one prominent store in a large city said that the store had eight hundred models and combinations. There will be no dearth of styles therefore, the fear being rather that the great number of styles and designs will perplex the prospective purchaser. At the outset, it may be said that Russian and the sailor styles may be practically eliminated from consideration. These having due their duty have gone to a merited rest.

Foremost among the models which will appeal to the mother's eye, will be the combination popularly known as the Oliver Twist, or by some, the Dutch suit. This is a one-piece garment made of two materials, which match or at least harmonize as to color combination. It may be had either in wool and heavy materials or in wash suits. In the former, blue or white serge pants are combined with striped or checked waist, one of the colors in which matches the pants which are made of plain colored material with the straight bottoms. The suit buttons on, with large pearl buttons, these composing the only trimming. A combination which is expected to prove a winner in this style is made with black velvet pants and a shepherd plaid waist. The white pearl buttons make exquisite trimmings. In wash suits there is an almost endless array of combinations. Another model is a nifty suit with straight pants and straight cut blouse. Among the somewhat extreme models, of which there are many, one which is expected to attract much attention may be denominated an English Officer Suit. It comes principally in a blue coat faced at the collar and cuffs with white and trimmed with braid. The coat is short and has rounded corners. May be had with fine pants cut straight or with white pants of the same material as the facing. Practically all the juvenile suits are made with straight pants. A showing of straight pants in suits for the larger boys last season did not seem to meet with much favor and as a result knickerbockers with button instead of buckle have come into use again, but all little fellows' suits, up to ten year sizes are made with straight pants. Still another novelty—space forbids a description of many—is a sash suit, made much on the order of the Oliver Twist, the difference being a sash, something on the Fauntleroy order.

Then for boys a little older, just after the novelty juvenile suit is discarded and just before the mannish Norfolk suit is donned, the junior Norfolk is the thing which will get the eye. This has been called "a big style for little men" and combines in its construction the elements of the Norfolk with some of the elements of the small boys' suit. It comes either single or double breasted and has a turn down self collar which buttons up close to the neck, made in three button style straight trousers and patch pockets. It might be added at this juncture that everything will be described hereinafter, but the thing of great interest in boys' clothing is that much better and a greater variety of fabrics will enter into the construction of these goods. Having the vast foreign markets as well as the domestic market to draw upon has greatly increased the number of patterns. These beggar description, though it might be said that a double stripe on blue or black ground is a handsome one, sure to gain attention. Strong color mixtures is the feature. In two tone effects the colors stand out strongly. Rough effects will predominate. A novelty worthy of special note is a yokeless Norfolk coat suit with what is known as a three piece belt. In the back a half belt is stitched on as far as to the side seams. Above this are the only pleats, there being none in the front. At each end of this stitched on half belt the front part of the belt buttons, so that it may be detached and will leave the effect of a young man's coat, with patch pockets, and rounded corners.

Norfolk reefer will be provided for those boys who want an early spring outer garment, and spring overcoats made on the Balmain order may be had. Palm Beach suits will also be shown in sizes from seven to seventeen, for the real hot weather. A waist has been designed, the collar of which may be turned in on the effect of a V shape and the edges made by so doing will be finished. The waist also has a regular collar, has three-quarter sleeves.

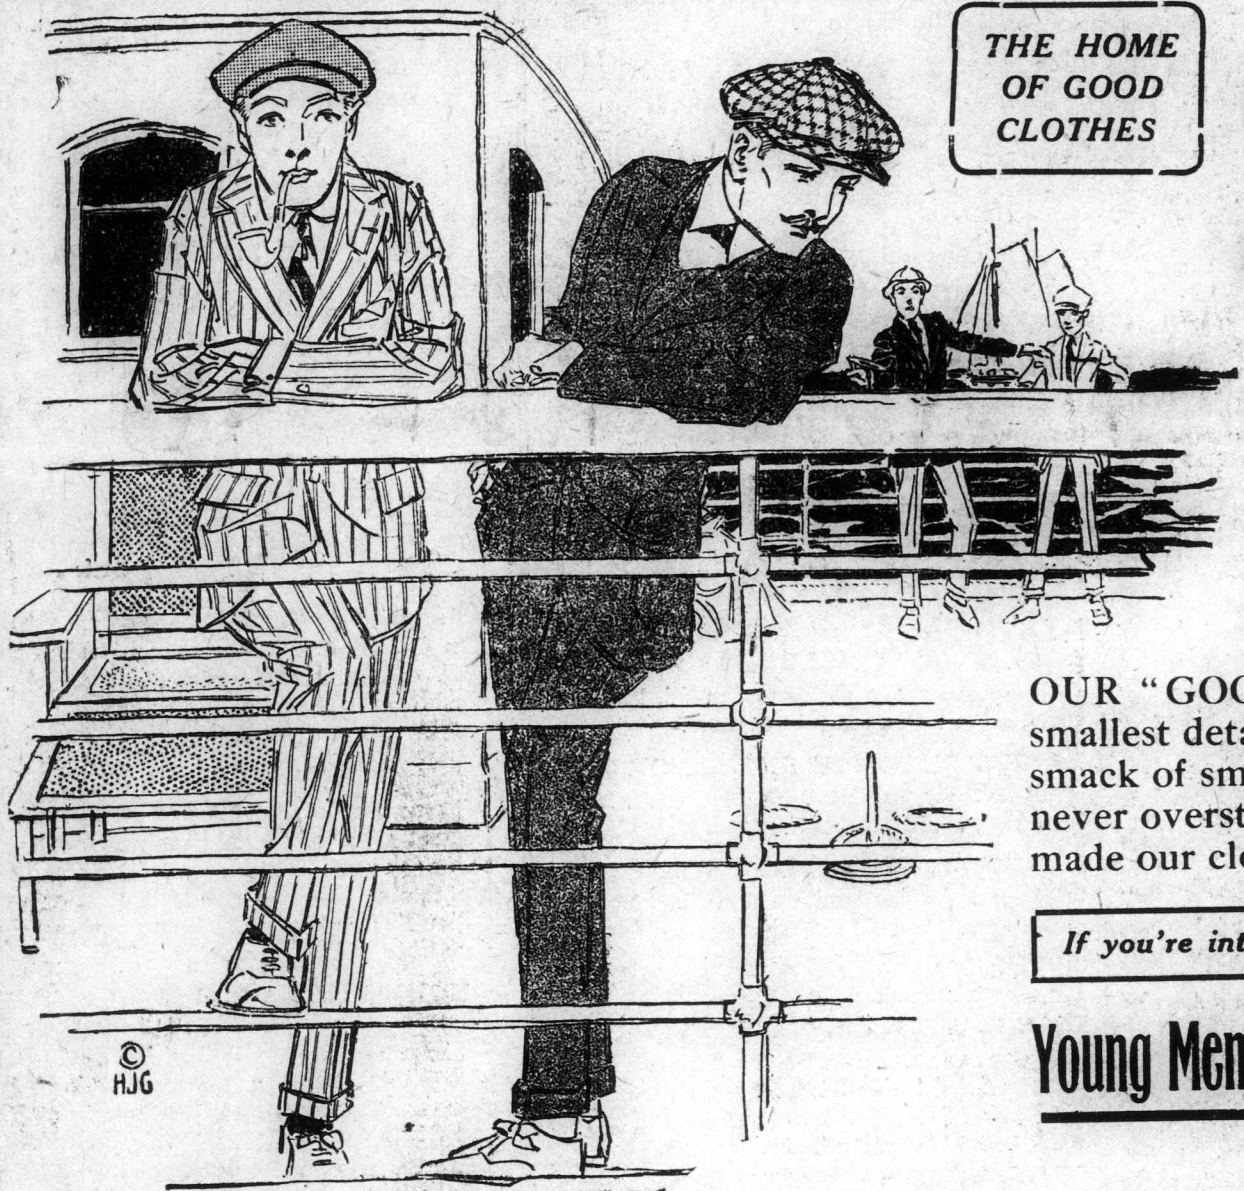

English cloth hats are expected to meet with much favor with mothers who have been dismayed by the youngster's determination to wear caps. It is thought that the boy will take to these which look more stylish than the cap.

THE very latest vogue in hats is the PENCIL BRIM with BUTTERFLY BOW. We have them in NAVY, GREY, OLIVE and HEMLOCK GREEN. The newest in hats, as in everything else, is our hobby. We have but a limited quantity of these. Better get yours while you have a choice. Popularly priced at $2.00 to $4.00. All makes.

The New Ideas in Young Men's Clothes

Are Here for Your Easter Choice!

THERE will be hundreds of styles offered to young men this season. There will be "freaks" that never did measure up to ideals of refined dressers. There will be "fads" and novelties ---here to-day and gone to-morrow. There will be copies of real styles that only approach the original in beauty---so beware!

OUR "GOOD CLOTHES" have for years stood for exactness and correctness in style to the smallest detail. "Doubtful Styles" are never found in our "Good Clothes." The Styles that smack of smartness—the distinguished deft style touches that appeal to fashionable young men—never overstep the bounds of refinement, and it is this confidence of being correct in style that has made our clothes the reigning favorites with the young men, the professional and business men.
