Ups and Downs.

"Really your face is very familiar, sir, but you seem to have the advantage of me in names."

And she looked at the distinguished stranger with a puzzled air.

"I fancied," he said, "that you would know me. My name is Bangs, and four years ago I had the honor to be your coachman."

The face of the lady blazed.

"But a remarkably lucky series of stock investments," he went on, "has enabled me to become your next door neighbor."

The lady's face softened.

"So pleased to renew our acquaintance, Mr. Bangs," she smilingly said.—Ex.

Vastness of St. Peters.

During a recent ceremony in St. Peter's, Rome, one of the crystal chandeliers suspended from the ceiling began to creak ominously, and the people beneath it hastily scattered. In a moment the mass fell and was dashed into a thousand pieces on the floor below.

In St. Peter's a few days before when the workmen were suspending these chandeliers they were taking them out of piles of numbered boxes, for St. Peter's, like a theater, has many "properties" and is decked in a different manner for its different ceremonies.

Cords run over pulleys fastened far up aloft, and with these the chandeliers were hoisted to their places. St. Peter's is so enormous that the eye there is continually deceived. The chubby cherubs at the holy water font look to be the size of ordinary babies, yet they are nearly seven feet tall, and a man standing beside them looks like a dwarf.

When the workmen were hoisting these chandeliers from the floor, a traveler noted with amazement that the masses of crystal were over eight feet high. Yet when hoisted to their places far up in the dim heights they looked about the size of a man's head.

Workmen in St. Peter's are called "sanpietrini." They take their name from the basilica "San Pietro"—"sanpietrino," plural "sanpietrini." They have a set of lofty scaffolds mounted on rollers. These they move from place to place about the vast church. They are not unlike our fire departments' water towers. Ladder after ladder runs up the scaffolding, and by their aid they reach places from 100 to 150 feet above the floor. Other ingenious scaffoldings are used for work on the inside of the dome. Seen up there the "sanpietrini" look like flies crawling on the ceiling. The top of the dome is about 400 feet above the floor.—Ex.

CREEK NOTES.

Mr. and Mrs. Thompson, of 43 above Bonanza have been visiting friends in Dawson during the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Harrison, of 38 Eldorado, were in town last Wednesday and Thursday.

Mr. Fairchild, of Chechako Hill, was in town on business Saturday.

Mr. Garvie, of Grand Forks, came to town on his byke yesterday morning.

Mr. Martin X. Johnson, of 25 Eldorado, has been suffering with a severe attack of neuralgia for the past week.

Mrs. J. D. Barnes, of Monte Cristo Hill, is very low with pneumonia, two physicians being almost constantly in attendance.

Mr. O. H. Perkins, night engineer on 40 Eldorado, fell down a 23 foot shaft last Thursday night. His rubber boots slipped when he attempted to go down the ladder, and sent him to the bottom landing on his feet. He sustained no further injuries than a badly sprained ankle.

Mr. Chas. Worden, of 25 Eldorado, received a telegram from Phoenix, Arizona conveying the sad intelligence of the death of his brother, M. Worden, who died at that place last week of consumption. The deceased was an old timer in this country, although but 23 years old, and the original staker of one of the group of claims now owned by Stanley & Worden.

The Forks four hundred was all out last night to a dance given in the town hall. The music was of a superior quality and the affair was one of the big events of the social season.

Not the Strenuous Life.

"I have always envied those men who sit in front of livery stables," said a citizen who admits that he is constitutionally lazy.

"That seems to me a beautiful life. It must be one long, sweet song, as the poet puts it. I have never known any of them personally," he continued, sighing, "but I have watched them all my life, and they fill me with a yearning to be a livery stable man. When I was a boy, I had to pass a large livery stable on my way to school. It had an immense double door, which was never closed, and inside was a cool, dim vista of stalls and buggies in rows. Four men were always seated at the threshold, tilted back in cane bottomed chairs. They were large, well fed, contented looking men, and what impressed me particularly was their air of placid abstraction. They never said anything to one another, but sat there calmly gazing into space and chewing straws. I remember distinctly that the sight of them always filled me with rebellion against work and made my school tasks seem all the more abhorrent. I had an almost irresistible inclination to chuck my books into the gutter, seize a cane bottomed chair and a straw and become a livery stable man myself."

"I have never got rid of that feeling," the lazy citizen went on, lighting his pipe, "and the strange part about it is this: In all the years that have gone by that group at the big door has never changed, and, moreover, it isn't peculiar to any one stable; it is common to them all. Go where you will, whenever you encounter a livery stable you will invariably find four large, well fed, contented looking men tilted back in cane bottomed chairs at the entrance, chewing straws and gazing into space. They always look exactly alike and never get any older or any younger. It is my private belief that they are immortal, and I have never asked any questions because I don't want to run the risk of shattering a beautiful ideal. What is it that Bret Harte says about San Francisco—

"Serene, immutable as fate, Thou sittest at the western gate."

"That describes them exactly, and I am certain the poem must have been inspired by a California livery stable. Wars may rage, and thrones may decay, and Mac may annex the Filipinos or tell them to go to thunder, but nothing will ever disturb the grand serenity of that group at the front door. I think it very unkind of fate that I should have become a hardworking professional man. I would have made a superb ornament for one of those cane bottomed chairs."—Ex.

Crowned King of Prussia.

Berlin, Jan. 1.—Emperor William was crowned king of Prussia today at Koenigsberg. The Prince of Wales and the Duke of Connaught represented Great Britain at the ceremony. All the monarchies in Europe were represented. The ceremonies were very elaborate. The crowning will be celebrated by fetes lasting for many days, and the entire German empire will be given over to festivity.

Out of His Line.

Crawfoot—Say, if you air so all fired good at problems, tell me how far off thunder is when you hear the first roll. Calculator—Fcan't do that, sir.

Crawfoot—Yeou kairn't? Calculator—No; I'm the lightning calculator.—Ex.

Arsenic Law Takes Effect.

Boston, Jan. 1.—The arsenic law went into effect today. It will be enforced by the state board of health. Its passage was a complete surprise to many manufacturers and dealers. It is practically prohibitory to some classes of goods. No woven fabric, paper, or article of dress or of household use containing arsenic in any form can be sold under severe penalties. The state board of health worked 14 years to secure this law.
